STILL WATCHES FOREIGN PRESS

Despite New Secretary, Hammann Is Power.

GERMANY FEELS HIS INFLUENCE

Next to Kaiser in All Political Moves.

Ex-Newspaper Man Attracts Attention of the Imperial Chancellor by Pamphlet on Best Methods of Combatting the Growth of Socialism in Germany and Hammann Is Appointed to Position He Holds

Berlin Aug 4—Despite the assumption of office Tuesday by Herr Von Jderlen Wechter the new secretary of state for foreign affairs the real power in Germany foreign policy will continue to be an ex newspaper man Privy Councillor Hammann now the senior member of the permanent staff of the foreign office

Hammann who is a man of the highest academic education and possess the degree of Doctor of Laws was an obscure newspaper man seventeen years ago which attracted the attention of the imperial chancellor of that time Count Caprivi by a pamphlet on the best methods of combatting the growth of socialism in Germany General Caprivi was so impressed with this article that he appointed Hammann to control the press department of the German foreign office

This department is for the purpose of enabling Germany to keep a close grip on both the German and foreign press

Grasps Opportunity

Hammann saw in his new work the opportunity for power and in the fourteen years that he has held the post he has grown into a position of influence second only to that of the Kaiser himself How the man behind the scenes in all of Germanys political moves

It is an open secret that Hammann brought about the withdrawal of Baron Schoen who preceded Kiderlen Wechter as foreign secretary and virtually forced the elevation of Kiderlen Wechter to his post the latter was in the days of the Kaiser who indeed had no spoken to him for sixteen years Hammann however was able to bring about his appointment because of the tremendous influence he wields in both the German and foreign press It goes without saying that Hammanns influence over the foreign secretary is an potent

BLIND SENATOR FIRST WITNESS

Gore Expected To Open Indian Matter.

INVESTIGATION STARTS THURSDAY

Committee Will Look into Certain Contracts

Oklahoma Senator Charges That He Is Offered Big Bribe To Have Certain Choctaw and Chickasaw Indian Coal Land Contracts Approved, and an Investigation Is Ordered by Congress as a Result

Muscogee Okla Aug 4—Senator Thomas P Gore was the first witness called before the congressional committee which today opened its investigation into the charges made by Gore during the last session of congress that he had been offered a bribe of $ 0 000 to have certain Choctaw and Chickasaw Indian coal land contracts approved

An inquiry will also be made into the contracts held by J C McMurray

In making his charges in congress Senator Gore did not give the names of the men who offered the bribe but says that during the investigation he will disclose the details of the scheme together with the names of the men back of it

Gore alleges that the contracts which he was asked to get approved would have thrown Indian lands valued at $ 000 000 into the hands of private attorneys

The Committee.

Besides the members of the investigating committee, many others interested in Indian lands are now here Among these are Cecil Lyons chairman of the Texas Republican state committee who was charged by Congressman Murphy with having assisted in working for the approval of the contracts and Ormsby McHarg New York counsel for the Choctaw Indians

The investigating committee is headed by Congressman Charles H Burke of South Dakota Others on the committee are

Congressmen Campbell, of Kansas Miller of Minnesota Stephens of Texas and Saunders of West Virginia

McMurrays counsel will claim that the contracts made with the Indians were valid as the Choctaws are members of what is known as the Five Civilized tribes and had the right of citizenship to make contracts It will be denied that any bribe was offered

After taking evidence at Muscogee the committee will visit McAlester Oklahoma City and other points where efforts will be made to secure from the Indians direct information as to the drawing of the contracts

The First Evidence

The first evidence offered was a letter written to Senator La Follette by Gore prior to Gores election to the senate This letter was merely to show the interest he has taken in the Indian matters Gore said

The senator then stated that McMurray came to his office in Washington last winter and asked his assistance in the matter of legislation which would provide the payment of a fee of ix per cent on Freedman land contracts amounting to $ 7 000

Gore said he told McMurray he was against paying out of the Indian fund any money for attorneys fees except where service were actually required and rendered and further notified McMurray that he was opposed to the individual contracts with Indians calling for fee of ten per cent of the proceeds of the sale of segregated coal lands

It was on these contracts Gore charged that the bribe of $ 0 000 had been offered

TEAR DOWN THE FLAG OF ITALY

Revolution Breaks Out Down in Honduras.

MANY AMERICANS SEEK PROTECTION

They Flee to the United States Consulate.

Duke of Scylla, the Italian Representative, Enraged at the Action of the Soldiers in Tearing Down the Italian Flag, Cables His Government To Send Warship To Protect Country's Interests.

Puerto Cortez Spanish Honduras, Aug 4—Fighting and revolutionary demonstrations of a serious nature have broken out in many parts of Honduras Americans fled to the United States consulate at Legucigalpa seeking protection after a violent uprising of a score of soldiers when the flag of Italy was torn down and an Italian killed

The Duke of Scylla, the Italian representative enraged at such action has cabled his government to send a warship to protect the countrys interests

The entire republic is in the grip of the revolution, uprisings having broken out in every town of any size in the country American interests are believed to be in danger, as there is a bitter anti American sentiment among the loyalists The consulate at Celba is filled with refugees

The revolution was planned and directed by Manuela Bonilla former president of the republic who was deposed by Zelaya when the latter was president of Nicaragua

Bonilla Starts Things.

President Davilla was then placed in office and two years ago Bonilla started his plans for a general uprising Arms and ammunition have been received at various times by him and when the signal was given, yesterday throughout the republic, his followers made a concerted attack

It is not believed the fighting will last long as most of the government troops vanished when the revolutionists struck Bonilla is reported to be ready to legucigalpa with 2 000 men and is not expected to meet with great opposition Lee Christmas an American long known as a promoter of Latin American revolutions is in command of Bonillas forces backed by a corps of American gunners and sharpshooters

The government has placed a strict censorship on all outgoing cablegrams and it is not yet known how many towns Bonilla has taken Reports say that several Americans have been arrested as revolutionists but confirmation is lacking

AFTER INFORMATION REGARDING LORIMER

Chicago Tribune Says That's Senator Crane's Mission to West

Chicago Aug 4—Senator Cranes mission to the West was for no other purpose than to ascertain for the information of President Taft the exact financial and political status of Senator William Lorimer according to a statement made today by the Chicago Tribune

The Tribune is the bitter enemy of Senator Lorimer and exposed the alleged Democratic vote buying whereby the Republican senator was given his seat According to the Tribune Senator Crane talked with forty or fifty Chicago business men bankers and others regarding Lorimer and the bribery charges which the senatorial investigating committee will begin to unravel here September 11 It declares to have from an unimpeachable source that Senator Crane turned back to Beverly when he left last night a distinctly unfavorable report of Lorimer

Incidentally Crane inquired as to Taft's homes in this territory in 1908 and was vitally interested to learn the effect on public sentiment of the return of Theodore Roosevelt

TRUE FRIENDSHIP.

By William T. Ellis.

Terse Comments on the Christian Endeavor Topic for August 7, "Christ, Our Friend." John 15:9-16.

There is a friend that sticketh closer than a brother, and whose love is strong as death. Never did friendship have to undergo greater testing than His. The offering that He made on love's altar was more than life itself. That friend is Jesus Christ, who stands today at the door of every heart, pleading for admittance as a friend. Until we let Him in we shall never know love in its fulness.

The spirit-filled life is empty of self. When Christ comes in, self goes out. The two are incompatible. When Jesus begins to reign He dethrones selfishness. If there is to be a new life, there must be an utter surrender of the old will, with all its ways. The presence of God in a person's heart is proved by a character of unselfishness and service. It is impossible for Christ to dwell in a selfish heart, for to do so would be to share an idol's throne.

We have many needs in the Christian life, but the one need which includes all others is the need of Christ. Do we lack joy? It comes by having more of Christ. Is peace absent from my heart, the presence of Christ alone gives peace. Do we want more love? We may have it by having more of Him whose other name is love. All the problems of religion, positively all, resolve themselves finally into this one supreme problem: How to have more of Christ in the believer's heart. We have everything when we have Him.

The nearer one's friendship approaches to the standard of Jesus, the surer it will be to remain unfailingly true, despite every failure of its object of love.—Trumbull.

If you are a true friend to any man, you are so sure of him that you will not let any slur against him go unprotested because you know that it must be false. Shall we be less true to Christ?

Christ's proof of His friendship for us is His giving us the very best He has, even the truth given Him by His Father.—Amos R. Wells.

Our Companion is our guide.

The abiding life is the abounding life. They who walk in Christ lack no good thing.

When our life with Christ is identified, then our love for Christ is intensified.

It is when rooted in Christ that we bear the fruits of the spirit. These are possible only to those whose roots strike down into Christ Himself. That is the one and only way of attaining these graces of beauty. They can not be imitated successfully, and they can not be grown by any other kind of life than that which is united to Christ. But such a life can not help bearing them unconsciously, any more than a perfect fruit tree can help bearing its fruit in season.

We must be willing to go Christ's way if we would walk at His side.

Companionship and communion with Christ can be gained only at the price of obedience.

There is a difference between companionship and communion. Judas had companionship with Jesus; John had communion. Two bodies may walk life's way side by side and yet their spirits be miles apart. Two uncongenial men may be required to live and work in each other's presence constantly. That is a companionship without communion. But each of those men may have a friend, hundreds of miles distant, with whom his heart is in sympathy. That is communion without companionship. The Christian's privilege is a higher, sweeter one than mere association with Christ; it is life in Christ.

We can not walk the world's way and keep company with Christ.

PRINTED PAMPHLETS SHOWING ASSESSMENTS

Are Sent to Property-Owners of Various Townships,

WITH EXCEPTION OF MARION TOWNSHIP

Corrected Report from Marion Township Is Expected This Week—Records of Valuations in Marion Will Probably Be Turned Over Some Time During the Week.

County Auditor Charles L. Allen, in compliance with the quadrennial assessors' law, has mailed to every property-owner in the townships and village of the county, with the exception of Marion township, in printed pamphlet form, a list showing all the real estate in each township and village together with the lot number, township, range, survey, acreage and the valuation returned by the assessors.

Owing to errors of address, it is expected that a number of the pamphlets will be returned undelivered through no fault of the county auditor, and taxpayers residing in the townships and villages outside of Marion, who have not received notices of their assessments, may secure the printed forms by calling at the auditor's office.

John I. Franz, assessor for Marion township, is expected to turn in his corrected report some time this week. He expected to make his report last week, but was sent back with his books to rectify a number of clerical errors.

The records of valuations have not yet been turned over to the Marion city board of equalization, the members of which are still working as the board of review. It is stated, however, that the city board of quadrennial land assessors will complete its work some time this week. Under the law, all the figures ought to have been in the hands of the city board of equalization by August 1.

The city board of equalization will organize by electing G. H. Foster, president, George T. Geran, clerk, and Andriot Allen, secretary. Mr. Allen is made secretary by statute.

The Value of Doors.

When a man is cross there isn't anything in the world more aggravating than a house with all the connecting doors down or one that has doors that close noiselessly. A man likes to slam a door. He gets more good out of slamming a door in his opinion, than any one could get out of religion. It is his protest against everything in the world that is wrong, and it means that he isn't much older than the child that beats its head on the floor.—Atchison Globe.

NARROW ESCAPE OF A PARTY OF SEVEN

From Death or Injury by a Fast Erie Express.

ENGINE BARELY MISSES LOG WAGON

One of the Girls, Seeing the Danger, Jumps from the Load of Logs Upon Which They Are Riding and Is Pulled Off the Track—Tire of Automobile Cut.

Caledonia, O., Aug. 4.—[Special.]—James Busch and six young ladies—Alice Hanley, Mildred Koch, Eva Martin, Alva Douce, Ruth Baker and Mildred Seckel—narrowly escaped death, Friday afternoon, under the wheels of Erie fast express train, No. 13. Mr. Busch was hauling logs and had a heavy load. The girls had been enjoying a picnic in the woods, and concluded to ride to town on a load of logs. Just as Mr. Busch drove up to the railroad crossing on High street the crossing gates were lowered and he stopped with his load. The gates were not working right and were no sooner down on the roadway than they raised again. Mr. Busch drove across the Big Four and had started across the Erie when he heard the whistle of the train, which had already reached the curve east of town. He could not back off the track, but hit the team with the lines and just cleared with the load as the train dashed past. The girls screamed with fright and jumped, Miss Baker falling in the middle of the track. She was pulled away by two of the others just in time. The engineer applied the air, but could not stop on account of the short distance and heavy load he was pulling.

Some miscreant cut the tire on Dr. J. E. Baker's automobile, last Sunday night. The cut was a deep one and looked as though made with a heavy pocketknife, circling the wheel with the exception of the part that rested on the ground.

The Ladies' Aid society of the M. E. church met at the home of Mrs. C. C. Koch, southwest of town, last Thursday afternoon. Fourteen members were present and three guests, Mrs. Wesley Ulsh, of Marion, and Mrs. Irene Nesbitt and Mrs. Ella Douce. HARRY FERRIN IS CAUGHT AT DAYTON

Constable James Ullom Goes to the Gem City,

TO BRING FERRIN BACK TO MARION

Ferrin Is Wanted on Forgery Charge and a Charge of Non-Support of His Infant Children—Taken in Columbus Some Time Ago, but Escapes from Police.

After eluding the authorities for many weeks and mysteriously breaking jail once, following his arrest at Columbus, June 15, Harry Ferrin, known as "Chicken," wanted here on two charges of forgery and for non-support of his two minor children was arrested by the chief of police of Dayton, at Dayton, Wednesday night

News of Ferrin's arrest was received by Justice Charles H. Conley, Thursday, and Constable James Ullom was despatched to the Gem City to bring him back here to answer the charges against him

According to the local authorities, Ferrin has a mania for giving checks to people and securing money without having any money on deposit. Heretofore, because of his wife and children, Ferrin's victims have always been ready to settle with him, his father, Albert Ferrin of Green Camp township, making good the amount obtained by his erring son and thus escaped prosecution.

Last March, Ferrin borrowed $30 from Charles H. Keller, of Waldo, and gave his father's note as security. He is alleged to have forged the signature. The father refused to settle, and Keller filed an affidavit against the son, who disappeared and deserted his wife and two children, Florence, aged thirteen years, and Proctor, aged two years. Later Mrs Ferrin filed an affidavit in Justice Conley's court. She charged her husband with failure to provide for his children.

May 24, J. L. Price field an affidavit against the missing man. He charged him with forgery. Ferrin is alleged to have given Price, a coal dealer, a check for $12.10, in payment of a five-dollar coal bill, and received from Price $7.10 in change, representing that he had money in the Marion County bank to meet the payment of the check. Price filed the affidavit after he learned the check was worthless and that Ferrin had disappeared.

A peculiar feature of Ferrin's disappearance is that he was arrested at Columbus the middle of June by Patrolman Harry Fitzell, a former member of the local police department. Justice Conley was notified of his arrest and expected to send Constable Ullom after him the following morning, but shortly after midnight received a telephone message that Ferrin had escaped from prison.

Afterward Justice Conley visited police headquarters in Columbus, and complained about the manner of Ferrin's escape. The chief of detectives assured him that the police "dragnet" would be thrown out over the state for the Marion man, and Ferrin was finally caught after a long and patient search

CHRISTOPH HOFMANN ATTEMPTS SUICIDE

At His Home on Mark Street Monday Night.

HE SHOOTS HIMSELF THROUGH THE NECK

After Locking His Wife and Son in Room Upstairs—Shooting Follows Jolly Time Between Hoffmann and His Wife—Recovery of Hofmann Is Not Expected.

Quietly locking his wife and son upstairs after they had gone to bed, Christoph Hofmann, aged about sixty years, a shoemaker, stepped out the backdoor of his home, No. 530 east Mark street, and shot himself, with suicidal intent, through the throat and mouth with a thirty-eight caliber revolver, Monday night shortly after 8 o'clock. The bullet passed under the right jaw and partially severed the lower portion of his tongue, paralyzing that member. His recovery is very doubtful

Hofmann's act of attempted self-destruction is somewhat of a mystery. Only a short time before he shot himself, neighbors say, he and his wife were in the back yard "laughing and cutting up."

Mrs. Hofmann, who is the wounded man's third wife, says she has no idea of why her husband should want to kill himself. He had been a sufferer from rheumatism, but had greatly improved of late. Recently he built a little shop at his home, and was doing about all the shoe repair work that he could handle.

The attempted suicide created much excitement in the neighborhood. Hearing the shot, several neighbors ran to the Hofman home. Mrs Hoffman, who is an aged woman, and Jacob Hofmann, the son, were released from their locked upstairs rooms.

The elder Mr. Hofmann was found lying on the ground, bleeding profusely from the jagged wound in his throat. The bullet narrowly missed the jugular vein, which, it is believed, the desperate man sought to sever with the shot.

Drs. J. B. Taylor and Herman S. Rhu were summoned They hold out little hope for the man's recovery. Owing to the paralyzed condition of his tongue, he is unable to talk.

Mr. Hofmann has two sons and one daughter—John Hofmann, of Cuyahoga Falls; Mrs James Severns, of Reed avenue, and Jacob Hofmann, who lives at home.

PECULIAR CASE OVER IN MORROW COUNTY

Charles Neubaurer Sues Mayor Retterer for $1,000.

As a result of boot-legging cases tried before him, Mayor Henry Retterer, of Cardington, has been made the defendant in an action for $1,000 damages brought in the Morrow county common pleas court by Charles Neubaurer, through Attorneys DeGolley & DeGolley, of this city.

Neubaurer, formerly a resident of Richland township, was found guilty by Mayor Retterer of violating the Rose local-option law. His fines and costs amounted to over $300.

In his petition, filed in Morrow county, Neubaurer sets up that, although the mayor informed his attorneys he would allow him to file a bill of exceptions, he refused to furnish a perfect record and transcript of the cases so that he could carry them to the common pleas court, on error. Because the mayor refused to furnish a transcript showing that his bill of exceptions was allowed, Bauer says he could not go up on error, and was compelled to pay the fines and costs, and therefore asks judgment for $1,000 against the mayor and his bondsmen.

Mayor Retterer's bondsmen, who are well known here, are James Degan, A. L. Caton and George W. Myers.

CRIPPEN TAKEN ON HIGH SEAS

Says He Is Glad the Suspense Is Over.

THE ARREST IS QUITE DRAMATIC

Inspector Dew Is Disguised as a Pilot

Scotland Yard Man Meets Montrose and Has American Dentist in Custody Before Passengers Know That Strange Couple Are Man and Woman for Whom Police Throughout the World Make Long Search.

Father Point, Aug. 1.—Charged with the murder and mutilation of his actress wife, Belle Elmore, in London, Dr. H. H. Crippen was arrested on the steamship Montrose, two miles off Father Point, by Provincial Detectives McCarthy and Dennis, who were accompanied by Inspector Dew of Scotland Yard. The Le Neve girl was arrested as a suspect. She was dressed as a boy.

The arrest was very dramatic. Inspector Dew boarded the Montrose disguised as a pilot, as Crippen was pacing the deck with Surgeon Stewart. He saw the pilot boat pulled by but four seamen and remarked that there seemed to be a good many pilots in the boat, but he made no attempt to escape. He continued to promenade for five minutes, after which Crippen felt a tap on his shoulder and turned to face Inspector Dew in uniform.

When Dew touched Crippen on the shoulder, all the latter said was: "I am glad the suspense is over. The anxiety was too great for me to bear."

Crippen was immediately taken to cabin B, while Miss Le Neve remained in room 5, in a state of collapse. This is the room that "John Philo Robinson, merchant of Detroit, and John George Robinson, student," had occupied. Miss Le Neve was furnished girl's clothing as soon as the arrest was made.

Made Trip In Fog.

A sharp, cold wind blew in from the east, and with it the fog from the Atlantic. Suddenly four masts and a funnel loomed indistinctly away on the waters where the sunshine held sway before. Before the shadows of the wharf a skiff shot out and lost itself in the mist. The dismal horn of the steamer hooted and the bell from the lighthouse buoy sent forth its message of guidance and assurance.

In the skiff sat four sailormen, peajacketed, brass-buttoned, vizor-capped officers of the pilot service. They rowed hard but clumsily, with grim determination in each stroke.

Aboard the steamer Montrose, five or six miles down the river, a nervous, careworn passenger paced the deck alone.

"Half speed," rang the bells from the bridge.

"What are we doing now?" inquired the nervous passenger of Dr. Stewart, the ship's surgeon.

"This is Father Point, Mr. Robinson, and we take the pilot aboard here," replied the medical man. "You can see the boat coming out to meet us there."

"There seem to be a good many pilots in the boat, doctor," remarked Mr Robinson, scanning the approaching craft with evident anxiety.

"Yes," said Dr. Stewart, "there are four."

"Stop," clanged the bell from the bridge to the engine room. The men in the skiff rested on their oars, a rope uncoiled neatly and the craft was warped gently alongside the vessel. Inspector Dew of Scotland Yard, dressed in a pilot's uniform; Chief McCarthy and ex-Chief Dennis, likewise attired, as well as Francois Gaudreau, the actual pilot, climbed to the deck of the Montrose.

Dew's hand was extended to the captain, but his eye passed on. "That's my man," he said.

Hard Role For Detective.

It was not hard to see that he was having a difficult time playing his role as pilot and itched to assert himself as an officer of the law. Captain Kendall, McCarthy and Dew chatted at the companionway. Dennis and Gaudreau turned forward to the wheelhouse. Dr. Stewart and Robinson passed so close to Dew that the latter could have touched him. Still not a move was made. Dew was sizing up his quarry carefully, pitiless. There could be no mistake. Robinson coughed slightly and turned toward the captain as though to ask a question. He was perfectly unconscious of the true state of affairs.

"Captain," he said, almost jovially, "I want to see you below a moment," said Dew, with his characteristic dislike. Then turning to Chief McCarthy he said, "That's the man." "I arrest you in the name of the king," said McCarthy. "You are my prisoner. Anything you say may be taken down in writing and may be used against you at your trial."

Passengers and crew knowing for the first time that something out of the ordinary was going on, crowded to the front, and McCarthy hustled his prisoner, not unkindly, down below. As they were descending the narrow ship's stairs Crippen said: "Have you a warrant? What is the charge?"

Throws Warrant on Floor.

McCarthy produced his authorization for making the arrest given him in Quebec by Judge Angers. Crippen grasped it before the chief could prevent him and read the backing greedily. "Murder and mutilation," he muttered to himself. "Oh, God!" He threw the warrant on the floor and continued to his cabin absolutely impassive.

A few seconds later a woman's shriek told that the Le Neve woman had been arrested. She had recognized Dew in the semi-darkness of the passage as she was emerging from her cabin to join Crippen. When McCarthy entered he found her lying on the bed fully dressed in boy's clothing. Her lips were trembling and her face was white as death. McCarthy said for a few moments he thought she would break down immediately, but she recovered herself wonderfully, and when Dew stepped into the cabin was quite composed.

As the pilot boat swung away from the Montrose's side Dew, Kendall, McCarthy and the two prisoners were closeted in the captain's cabin.

Crippen Arraigned.

Quebec, Aug. 1.—Dr. Hawley Harvey Crippen was arraigned before Judge Panet Angers shortly before noon today. The proceedings were brief. Crippen readily admitted his identity. He offered no objection to being sent back to England for trial. Judge Angers promptly remanded him to jail for fifteen days.

Miss Leneve was too ill to appear in court, the physicians announcing that she had broken down completely, and was in a condition of nervous collapse.

The formal arraignment did not take place in the regular police court room but in a private house near the parliament prison, where Judge Angers convened court to avoid the great crowd that had gathered to catch a glimpse of the prisoner.

SOUTHERN MOB LYNCHES NEGRO

The Black Assaults a White Woman.

HE USES RAZOR ON HER BROTHER

Shoots Another Negro and Hides in Woods.

Posse Goes After the Murderer and Catching the Black, It Shoots Him to Death and Burns His Body. There Seems Little Likelihood of Race Trouble Over the Incident and Posse Disbands.

Alexis, Ala., Aug. 1.—After having criminally assaulted and probably fatally stabbed Mrs. Nettie Gibson, thirty-one, white, wife of the superintendent of a farm near here, slashed her eight-year-old brother with a razor; shot another negro and forced the later's wife to take to the woods with him, Bill Walker, a negro, was shot to death and his body burned by a mob early today.

The negro woman who fled with Walker is still hiding in the woods if she has not been killed by a stray bullet from the posse.

Walker appeared at the Gibson home, last night, and induced Mrs. Gibson to leave the house saying that a neighbor had just died. He attacked her near her home and slashed her little brother with a razor when he ran to her assistance.

Mrs. Gibson was left dying and Walker went to the home of Jesse Brown another negro, and, raising a window, opened fire. Brown fell, fatally wounded, and Walker compelled Mrs. Brown to flee to the woods with him.

After a long search, which ended with Walker being lynched, the posse returned to their homes and there is little likelihood of race troubles.

MILLIONAIRES GIVEN SHOCK

Tax Reform Man After Wealthy Chicagoans.

MILLIONS IN BACK TAXES DUE COUNTY

The Big Beef Packers Head the List.

President Jones of Tax Reform League Gives Warning That He Will File Mandamus Proceedings To Compel Board of Review To Assess the Stocks Held by Wealthy Men of Cook County.

Chicago, Aug. 2.—Chicago millionaires and especially the men at the head of the big packing concerns, were given a rude shock, today, when they learned that figures of their actual wealth had been given to the board of review, with the statement that they had been evading taxation on $200,000,000 of stock in foreign corporations.

Frank W. Jones, president of the Illinois Tax Reform league, is the man making the charge and he gave the names of the companies in which they hold stock, the amount of the securities and the par value of the same. According to Jones these men owe the county at least $15,000,000 in back taxes.

Although there are seventy men named by Jones, with J. Ogden Armour and Edward Morris, of the packing interests, heading the lists, Jones gave warning that he would file mandamus proceedings to compel the board of review to assess the stock held by these men.

First on the list is J. Ogden Armour. Jones gives a list of stocks amounting to $32,000,000, which he says Armour owns and which the assessors have overlooked. Then comes Edward Morris, of the Morris & Company packing concern, with $29,919,700, and Arthur Meeker, president of the Armour company, with $5,370,000. Meeker is assessed on $5,000. Louis Swift is assesed on but $20,000, but Jones say the assessors overlooked $5,129,000. E. P. Swift, vice president of Swift & Company, was not assessed on $[illegible],000 in stocks which he is said to possess.

ELECTRICAL SURGERY LATEST IN SCIENCE

Paris Professor Talks to the Academy of Medicine.

Paris, Aug. 2. Electrical surgery, by which arms and legs will be painlessly amputated without recourse to knife or saw, is a development of the immediate future, according to an announcement, today, by Professional D'Arsonval, one of the medical authorities of Paris.

Dr. Doyen recently showed before the Academy of Medicine, the effect of an electrical current upon cancers and how a cure might be effected in this way. Professor D'Arsonval, following up these experiments, now declares he has treated the limbs of dogs with frequent electric currents, literally cooking the limbs so that they droped off of their own account. The animals so treated, he says, did not manifest the slightest traces of suffering. When the limbs dropped off, a healthy scar remained.

REAR ADMIRAL GOES TO HUNT HIS SON

Rodgers Retires from Service in Order To Take Up Hunt.

Seattle, Wash., Aug. 2.—After over a year in enforced activity, Rear Admiral Rodgers, today started for Alaska to search for his lost son, Alexander Rodgers, of whom nothing has been heard since early in 1909. The anxious father has been chained to his post as commander of the Puget Sound navy yard since his son's disappearance, and military regulations would not let him begin the search. The officer has retired from the service in order to take up the hunt for his son.

The last trace Rodgers has of his son is a rumor, brought by returning Alaskan miners, that young Rodgers was prospecting somewhere in the interior of Alaska.

CONGRESSMAN ASKS NAME WITHDRAWN

Johnson Has Better Job Offered to Him, He Says.

Ironton, O., Aug. 2.—At a meeting of the Tenth congressional district, yesterday, Congressman A. R. Johnson asked that his name be withdrawn as a nominee and suggested R. M. Switzer, of Gallipolis, as a successor. A fight over the choice of a successor ensued and the meeting adjourned to meet again at an early date.

Johnson gave as his reason for resigning, the offer of a remunerative job as corporation attorney.

KING ALFONSO RISKS HIS THRONE; PRETENDER DON JAIME THREATENS, AND MINISTER TO VATICAN IS ORDERED HOME

Madrid, August 1.—Great excitement prevails throughout Spain as the result of the breaking off of diplomatic relations with the Vatican at Rome and the recall of Ambassador Marquis de Ojeda. The situation is made more acute by the proclamation of Don Jaime, the pretender, which calls upon all Catholics to rally to the support of the church and the Pope. The trouble between Spain and the Vatican has been smoldering for more than a year, when King Alfonso promulgated a royal decree amending the constitution so as to permit the display of non-Catholic insignia on buildings occupied by other religious bodies. The cut shows the Vatican above, Pope Pius, the Marquis de Ojeda and King Alfonso in the coach and Don Jamie at the bottom.

OPPOSITION TO CRACKER TRUST

Federal Biscuit Company Has a Capital of $30,000,000.

New York, Aug. 1.—The Federal Biscuit company, a $30,000,000 merger of from seventy-five to 100 of the largest independent bakeries, became a reality, today, in opposition to the National Biscuit company, the so-called cracker trust. In the new trust are twenty-four companies in New York, many in New England, the Middle and Middle Western states, Oregon, Utah and the Dakotas. The company has issued $18,000,000 in preferred and $1,000,000 in the common stock will be offered to the public at the present time. Many of the plants now in operation will be closed and combined with others, which will be accordingly enlarged.

The organizer of the new trust is Hartwell G. Grubb, formerly of St. Louis.

CALIFORNIAN KILLS THREE

BEATS WIFE AND BABY TO DEATH

After Killing Fireman on the Street.

Bert Durham Resigns from Fire Department Because of a Fancied Grievance and Turns in False Alarm for His Old Company, Then Hides and Kills Approaching Fireman—Attempts Suicide.

San Diego, Cal., August 1.—While posses were seeking him, Bert Durham, who, late last night, murdered three persons and fatally wounded two others, attempted suicide by shooting here, early today, after he had read the newspaper accounts of his crimes. One of the dead is a city fireman; the others are Durham's wife and child, whom he beat to death. He is under arrest and may recover.

Durham was formerly a member of the city fire department, but recently resigned because of some fancied grievance. It is believed he is demented. He imagined that some of his associates in the fire department had been trying to "get his job," and, last night, he turned in a false alarm and lay in wait for fire company, No. 3, his old company, to respond. When the engine dashed up to the fire box, Durham, who was hidden nearby, opened fire. John Grant, a fireman, was instantly killed, while Captain E. P. Campbell, and Driver Elliott both fell, mortally wounded.

Durham then hurried to his home, where he told his wife what he had done and seizing a club beat her and their child to death.

Posses were organized at once and searched for the man all night until a patrolman reported to the police department that he had found Durham, dangerously wounded. He tried to end his own life.

SOCIETY LEADER KILLED IN HOME

Slayer Prominent in Pittsburg's Under World.

WOMAN THEN ENDS HER OWN LIFE

Evidence of Terrible Struggle Found.

Dr. Emert C. Stewart and Edna Wallace Found Dead and Almost Nude in Stewart's Residence—Victim's Wedding Garments Torn to Shreds. Furnish Clew as to Cause of the Double Tragedy in Smoky City.

Pittsburg, Aug. 2.—The dead and almost nude bodies of Dr. Emert C. Stewart, a leader of society, and Edna Wallace, a beautiful woman of the under world, were found in the palatial Stewart residence here. There is every evidence that the Wallace woman killed Dr. Stewart after a fearful struggle and that she then turned the revolver on herself. The crime is supposed to have been committed some time within the last three days, though the condition of the bodies when found led the police to believe that the pair had been dead some weeks. Later witnesses were found who saw a man and woman enter the homestead three mornings since.

Woman Became Enraged.

The evidence points to the fact that the Wallace woman, who was long a friend of the young society doctor, became enraged when shown the wedding garments of Dr. Stewart, who was to be married some time the coming week. His wedding suit, which was brought home from the tailor some weeks since, was torn almost to ribbons in the room where the bodies lay, the woman having evidently tried to tear the clothes up in her rage, and the doctor in his effort to save the clothing and his own life had overturned and broken almost everything in the room.

The police asserted that they had not the name of the young woman to whom Stewart was to have been married, but inmates of the Wallace dive, taken in charge by the police, declare that Dr. Stewart one week since, while visiting the woman, slapped her in the face when she mentioned the name of his intended wife.

"I'll get you yet," the Wallace woman is alleged to have said to Dr. Stewart, with whom she was madly in love. Some nights ago he returned to her place and they later motored away together happy. It would seem that the pair went directly to the Stewart mansion, which they entered to their death.

BAKER GIVES TIP TO THE PRESIDENT

Says Harding the Best Man Republicans Could Name.

Beverly, Mass., Aug. 2.—Vice President Sherman and William L. Ward, Republican national committeeman from New York, spent two hours with President Taft at the Evans cottage. For the most part the talk was about politics in general and politics in New York in particular. P. A. Baker of Columbus, O., a leader in the Anti-Saloon league, told the president that Warren G. Harding, recently nominated for governor on the Republican ticket in that state, would have a better chance of success at the polls than any other man the party might have selected.

HARDING CALLS ON GEORGE B. COX

Thanks Him for Casting Vote of Hamilton County.

Cincinnati, O., Aug. 2.—Warren G. Harding, of Marion, Republican candidate for governor, held a conference with Boss George B. Cox in Cincinnati, Monday night.

"The meeting had no political significance," said Harding, "I called merely to thank Mr. Cox for the ninety-one votes his delegation gave me, resulting in my nomination. My chief business in Cincinnati was to buy some motors for my newspaper."

Harding said he had nothing to say in regard to the political quarrel on between Cox and Senator Burton, of Cleveland.

In Fit of Dementia Woman Carries Out Murder Plot.

Denver Col Aug 2—A moving picture show depicting the murder of a young girl believed by the police to be responsible for a double tragedy here yesterday when Mrs Margaret Eveland shot and killed her husband as the latter was sleeping and then ended her own life

Mrs Eveland's mother Mrs Black heard two shots fired in quick succession and rushing to her daughter's bedroom found her daughter lying on the floor dead and Eveland dead in bed with blood gushing from a wound in the breast Mrs Eveland had shot herself in the temple

The police say there is no doubt that suggestion caused the tragedy as the couple had been particularly happy Mrs Eveland had been suffering from nervousness for several months Sunday night before her husband and then committed a moving picture theater and witnessed an exhibition depicting the killing of a young girl as she slept The police believe that the picture made such a deep impression on the young woman's overwrought mind that in a fit of dementia she unconsciously carried out in her own home the scene depicted in the moving picture theater

PEACEFUL TABBY AGENT OF MOST DEADLY GERMS

She Spreads Disease to Those Who Fondle Her

PHYSICIAN SAYS CATS SPREAD RINGWORMS

While Americans Wonder How the Postal Savings System Is To Be Established Unfettered Savages of Philippines Show Pass Book and Say Scheme Is an Old One

Washington Aug 1 Peaceful tabby purring upon the hearthrug and encircled by the white arm that now is declared by government scientists to be an agent of human most deadly germ spreading disease and death among those who fondle her

Investigation has proven that cats shed dirt upon which baby delights to rub its cheek Dirt the germs of tuberculosis of malignant and thirty deadly disease of babies and child in diphtheria

The cat returning animal lover the most carefully watched house pet will look out at night and it is then that they come in contact with fat cold dirt cats which live perhaps in squalid shanties among diseased stricken people Its long fur affords a natural breeding place for bacteria

The cat returns to its home thoroughly inoculated The mother smiles as the baby tumbles about on the floor with Tabby When the child is stricken every disease breeding source is considered except the family cat says Dr A M Fisher

A Noted Fact

It is a noted fact that people who would not touch a dog think nothing of fondling and kissing cats Felines are particularly fond of jumping upon the beds of their masters and cuddling close to them Babies are allowed to play freely with cats

Practically the one thing to be feared from a dog is hydrophobia To this terrible disease says Dr Fisher cats are as susceptible as dogs though they do not bite people as often yet cases of hydrophobia from cat bites are not infrequent

The biological survey is now working on plans to have laws passed in the District of Columbia as a guidance for all the states to license cats because they say most of the trouble comes from stray cats The danger in the house cat living in a clean home comes mainly through its contact with alley cats

Data is now being gathered by the survey upon the subject of disease infection by cats Dr Fisher hopes soon to publish a bulletin citing specific instances

Two Cases Given

Two cases are given by a prominent French scientist M Bergeon of cats which were infected with tubercular germs through contact with persons afflicted with the disease In both instances the cats were owned in families where young girls died from the malady The death of the cats occurred shortly afterward The doctors had noted the fondness of the girls for the cats A post mortem examination of the cats was accordingly made with the results that in both instances unmistakable traces of tubercular infection were found

The next charge brought against the cat by Dr Fisher is that it spreads ringworms a very painful and sometimes dangerous disease Rats and mice are peculiarly susceptible to this disease and it is transmitted from them to cats The presence of the disease on cats hidden by their fur is not uncommon It was through the frequent appearance of ringworms on hands of babies that the germ theory was first pursued in cats the cat

Cats are considered the natural enemies of rats and mice They are kept often simply to kill these pests Dr Fisher claims that not five per cent of the cats are mousers and that most of them kill game and song birds

A Cat's Quarry

As a matter of fact and Dr Fisher can point birds to mice They will tend twice as much to human birds as mice If one keeps count of a cat's quarry during the year he will find that the birds kill far outnumber the mice

Recently there has been much attention paid to cats and the harm they do both as destroyers and spreaders of disease In this connection it has been pointed out what a valuable animal the cat is to keep down the rats That is an error I can say from my own personal observation that only about five per cent of cats are mousers

Bird harmony will be done at the when cats will were exterminated but the scale is too much opposite Dr Fisher is still we think that when more the facts concerning cats are known and public mothers will be more careful in letting their children play with them

Postal Savings System

What Americans wonder when what how the postal savings system is established the unfettered savages of the Philippines show the pass book and say that in the Philippines the postal savings bank is an old thing Which lends and claims are Clements S Darr chief clerk of shells and bivalves received in the department and is Marsh B deposits is not mentioned but the chief geographer of the Geological main fact is the words in the Survey

In connection with their visit to Glacier National park a wonderland of ice glacier and wild mountain scenery lived as a playground for the people at the recent session of congress a question arose as to the payment of their expenses It seems that congress appropriated $1 000 for the improvement of Glacier park by the construction and repair of roads and trails

Question Arises

The question was whether Tucker and Marshall could use a part of that appropriation in securing a pack train guide camp equipment etc and also in paying railroad fare and Pullman and meal bills not to exceed $4 a day from Devils Lake North Dakota to Glacier park

The problem was referred to Comptroller of the Treasury Tracewell whose decision on the expenditure of government funds is final He rendered the decision in favor of the negative question It merely carries out the order of congress to construct and repair roads and trails It is necessary to hire inspection So that the work may be done to the best advantage then the actual expenses of the inspectors can be paid out of the $1 000 appropriation

The Saving Plans

One of the columns in the Standard consists of saving plans similar to those now being worked out by an newly organized bankers in this country The home Consul Walter C Hamm at Hull in his report is to establish rescue stations near steps of mines

It is proposed in the Durham field to establish a station for the housing of rescuers equipped with pumps powerful as those of the largest engines in the city fire department service to climb limit and clear up quantities for six or eight highly trained men A liquid air plant will also be erected Direct telephone connection will be arranged with all the mines in Durham county the nearest one being the hour of which the men

One method is to make use of a head dress to be supplied with fresh air by means of a flow through rubber tubing and the switchboard telephones It is thought that in mines where inflammable gases are likely to be met with the miners will be supplied with safety lamps and it is proposed that every rescuer should be equipped with a revolver of the Colt type with a view to dealing with the panic stricken miners who would rush from the fire in order to get out of the mine

The Standard says in commenting upon the subject that the plans are not known at the Home office but are believed to be sound

The worldwide search for Dr H H Crippen supposed to be the slayer of his wife who was Belle Elmore ended with the confirming messages from the steamer Montrose were received by the Canadian authorities Scotland Yard announced that the alleged murderer and his typist Ethel Le Neve were aboard Officials of the home office of the famous police headquarters covered portions of a body buried in quicklime in the cellar of the home of Dr Crippen in London on July 9 following a report sent out by the husband that his wife had died in Los Angeles California which a post mortem proved false It was after the finding of the body that the search was commenced for the missing doctor and the steamer leaving European ports for several days after the body was found watched and followed Inspector Dew of Scotland Yard left Liverpool on the latter vessel was scrutinized in midocean by the Laurentic bound for Quebec which was the first port of call for the Montrose The pending the boarding arrest accomplished by the ships officers by Inspector Dew The smaller picture shows Mr Crippen

THE SMALLEST PEOPLE ARE FOUND IN AFRICA

Some Remarkable Peculiarities of the Tiny Tots.

THE RACE OF DWARFS IS CONSIDERED HOLY

No Earlier Than 1891 Professor Marapa Discovers a Dwarf People in Europe, Nicknamed "Nanos"—A Race of Dwarfs Is Found in the Island of Luzon, in Philippines.

The recently reported discovery of a tribe of pigmies in Papua is interesting as showing how widely spread over the face of the earth are the races of little people. No earlier than 1891 Professor Marapa discovered a dwarf people in Europe. In the Eastern Pyrenees, in the valley of Ribas, he came across numerous groups of persons nicknamed "Nanos," which in our tongue means "the dwarfs," who never exceeded four feet in stature.

One remarkable peculiarity of these tiny tots is that they all have red hair, says the London Globe, but are well built in body, their hands and feet are small, while they are broad in shoulders and hips. They have full faces and pale and loose skins. Generally their personal appearance is so similar that difference in sex is only indicated by their dress. As long as they continue to marry strictly among themselves their race will not become extinct. They are of a very low type of intelligence, not even being able, at the time the professor visited them, to tell him where they lived.

If the conjecture of another learned man be correct, the little kingdom of Switzerland was once inhabited by a pigmy race. Some evidence for his conclusion was the discovery of bodies at Dachsenbuhl in 1847, while a few years since a number of human skeletons were unearthed at Schweizersbild in the Swiss Republic, and the professor declared them to be remains of dwarfs.

But in other parts of the world pigmy peoples are occasionally to be met with. Among these are the inhabitants of the Andaman islands in the Indian ocean, but they are not the smallest people known, that distinction standing to the credit of the Hamy Negrillos, who are found in Africa on either side of the equator.

The Andamanese are about the same height as the African Boscjemen or Bushmen, the average of the women being about four feet six inches the men being some inches taller. Their heads are of a short, round type, their hair being closely curled or woolly, while their skin is dark, almost black. They live chiefly on wild pigs, birds, wild fruits, honey, roots, seeds and such things as may happen to come their way; they are strictly tetotal as regards thirst quenchers, their only drink being water. These diminutive islanders are the only remaining pure specimens of a race said to have been the earliest inhabitants of a large part of southern Asia.

There are several tribes of dwarfs in the Congo district and in the Semliki Valley of whom Sir Harry Johnston gives an interesting and amusing account in his work on the "Uganda Protectorate" published in 1902 He says the huts of these people are usually placed in a little clearing between a clump of great tree trunks in a dense bit of forest.

Owing to the peculiar construction of these huts they are very difficult to distinguish in the gloom of the forest, so much so indeed that a traveller may have dwarfs living all around his camping ground and be unaware of their presence, especially as they contrive very cleverly to conceal their own tiny bodies.

Writing of these same folks in one of the reviews two or three years ago, Sir Harry said: "The dwarfs of the Congo forest can be good or bad neighbors to the black people. * * * I have been informed by some of the forest negroes that the dwarfs will occasionally steal their children and put in their places pigmy babies of apelike appearance."

"In Africa too, are found other pigmy peoples, such as the tribe called the Akkas, who dwell in the west of Lake Nyanza. The men and women of this tribe, we are told by those who have seen them, are only four feet in height, and dwell by themselves, apart from other negroes of Central Africa. Further, in 1895, a dwarf tribe was unearthed to the east of the Upper Nile.

They were described as the most primitive race on earth, possessing neither rules nor laws, and innocent of both clothes and weapons of offense and defense. They were said to feed upon serpents, mice, ants, and herbs, while the only thing that could be placed to their credit was that they had some glimmerings of religious belief.

Some races of dwarfs are considered as holy people. Such a diminutive people, as Mr. Haliburton informed the world some years ago, dwell in northwestern Africa, in the Atlas mountains, only a few hundred miles from the shore of the Mediterranean. These dwarfs of Morocco range between three and four feet in height, said the above mentioned authority, their color not being darker than that of the ordinary Spaniard. The Moors living in the neighborhood of these strange folk look upon them with great favor, as they consider them mascots to bring good luck.

The Island of Luzon, in the Philippines, contains a race of dwarfs, known as the Aetas, whose average height is four feet eight or nine inches. They dwell among the mountains in the interior of the island, thus bearing out the assertion of an authority that most if not all of the dwarf races only survive in the most inaccessible parts of the continents or islands to which they belong.

SCENES AT MONMOUTH COUNTY HORSE SHOW, LONG BRANCH'S BIG ANNUAL SOCIAL EVENT

Long Branch, N. J., July 29.—When the Monmouth county horse show opened in Hollywood park there was a splendid list of entries which included ribbon winners of national and international fame. Figure 1 shows Miss Helen C. Prentiss and Mrs. A. J. Davis. Figure 2 shows Mrs L. A. D. Percival riding Getta, winner of second prize in the contest for local saddle horses. Figure 3 shows James Schweiger, whose high jumping on Confederate was a notable figure of the show.

MERRY TIME AT WASHBURN HOME

A Surprise Given Mrs. Stiverson by Her Friends.

Morral, O., July 30.—[Special]—Miss Mildred Washburn very pleasantly entertained the members of the G. B. club and their gentlemen friends, Thursday evening, for the pleasure of Miss Marguerite Shoots, of near Marion, who has been her guest since Sunday. Dancing and various social pastimes were enjoyed until a late hour. A dainty luncheon was served. The following young people were present. Misses Hazel and Marguerite Shoots and Avah Morral, of near Marion, Beaulah and Hazel Cottrell, Roma Welsh, Hazel Schultz, Iona Washburn, Hazel Lupton and Mildred Washburn and Messrs. Melvin Postle of Mt. Victory, Carl Lewis, Merle Conley, Harry Ritter, Abner Busler, Bert Crim, Dwight Mahaffey and Dwight Stouffer.

Mr. J. H. Stiverson planned a delightful surprise for his wife for Thursday evening, it being the occasion of her birthday anniversary While she was absent at prayer-meeting, her friends invaded her home and had a fine spread in readiness when she returned. Mrs. Stiverson was completely surprised. The evening was merrily passed. Those in attendance were Mr. and Mrs Oren Foos and children and Mr. Foos' father, who is visiting here from Missouri; Mrs. Will Deal and children; Mr and Mrs. J. H. Bardon and family; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Messenger and family, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Richards and family, Mr and Mrs. Ray Spicer and family; Mr. and Mrs. John McCarley and family; Mrs. Lizzie Rose and daughter, Hattie; Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Morral, Mrs. W. A. Pryor and son, Clifford; Mr. and Mrs John Hartman and children, Gladys and Robert, Mr. and Mrs. S. M. Stouffer, Mrs. C. F. Cottrell, Miss Desda Neff, Mrs. George Jolley and children.

GOOD WORK

Done Daily in Marion—Many Citizens Tell of It.

Nearly every reader has heard of Doan's Kidney Pills. Their good work in Marion still continues, and our citizens are constantly adding endorsement by public testimony. No better proof of merit can be had than the experience of friends and neighbors. Read this case:

Mrs. Thomas Moore, 279 S. Prospect Street, Marion, Ohio, says: "I was subject to attacks of backache and often I had pains extending from my loins into my head. I was restless at night and my housework was very irksome. Having Doan's Kidney Pills brought to my notice, I obtained a supply at Schmidt & Co.'s Drug Store and a few days after I commenced their use, all signs of my trouble disappeared. Another member of my family took Doan's Kidney Pills and they proved of benefit in this case."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

JAPAN IS A LAND OF ENCHANTMENT

Path of the Tourist Made Smooth by Welcome Society.

Japan is an enchanting country to travel in, though mainly by reason of its natural beauty. It is a feast of color. You retain memories of vivid garments seen against the delicate green of young rice crops, of stone pines on precipitous hillsides, of the glories of the chery blossom in April, of little tea gardens softly radiant with wistaria, of gorges clothed with pink azaleas, of Fujl the incomparable with its crown of snow, of picturesque temples and the cryptomerias and shrines of Nikko, of Fuji again mirrored in the blue of Lake Hakone and of music in the early summer evenings at Kioto.

The path of the tourist even in the remoter districts is made smooth by the admirable Welcome Society. Yet, says a writer in the National Review, unless one happens to be very specially accredited most people leave Japan with the vague feeling that they have not seen behind the veil The true springs of Japan's greatness are not readily discerned by the casual traveller.

If you are content to see and to enjoy externals there is no more delightful land to roam in, but do not hope to understand the genius of Japan without long residence. Even on the eve of the war one could trace hardly any marked sign of the impending strife. Travel in Japan is so easy and so comfortable that detailed hints are almost unnecessary.

Living is rather dear in the resorts most frequented by foreigners, but cheap in the country districts and in spite of the constant influx of western Americans with piles of dollars prices are now lower than they were before the war. If you once give way to the almost irresistible temptation to buy curios in Japan you are financially doomed.

The fact is that, as European residents in the far East are finding out, there is no better way home from the Orient than through Siberia. The trains are splendidly equipped, with fine bathroom, good food, admirable sleeping berths and a comfortable lounge. At the same time it must be said that the rolling stock is not so good as it was at first. The journey is not exhausting because the pace is moderate, and there are plenty of opportunities for a stroll during the long and welcome stops at stations.

ABOUT PEOPLE.

Miss Margaret Kelly, a native of Portsmouth, New Hampshire, is the highest paid woman in the government service, receiving $2,250 a year as adjuster of mint accounts.

G. K. Chesterton is to venture into the field where Conan Doyle is supreme. He will write a series of detective stories under the title "The Innocence of Father Brown."

C. H. Haring, author of "The Buccaneers in the West Indies in the Seventeenth Century," is an alumnus of Harvard, who has also graduated as a B. Litt. at Oxford, has just been appointed to an instructorship at his alma mater, where he is preparing for his Ph. D.

A. T Quiller-Couch, who was knighted at the birthday celebration of King George last month, has written a new novel. "Lady Good-For-Nothing." It is a story of America in colonial times. Some of the other books are "Lone Tilda," "Poison Island" and "Sir John Constantine."

To study American railroad systems with a view to obtaining ideas for increasing the efficiency of lines under his direction in Russia, Mr. Nickolas von Ostrowsky, president of the Moskow and Windau-Rybinsk railroad, arrived in New York on board the Kaiser Wilhelm II., of the North German line.

James Richard Cox, law partner of William H Seward, when the latter was governor of New York, and for many years the intimate friend and adviser of Lincoln's secretary of state, died in Auburn, New York, from an attack of heart disease. His death was unexpected and was due to shock from a fall several days ago.

Miss Anna Quincy Churchill, of Dorchester, Massachusetts, has returned from Germany and will take up the study of symptomatology at the Boston School of Gymnastics with a view of making corrective work among children her profession. Miss Churchill has had the degree of A. M. conferred on her by Radcliffe and that of A. B. by Smith.

James Reeve, formerly curator of the Norwich, England, museum, has given to that institution one of the eight best known specimens of the great auk's egg. The museum already owns a specimen of the great auk itself.

Miss Anne Herendeen won the prize for the best suffrage essay read at the recent commencement of Wells College, Aurora, New York. In the last school year she was president of the Equal Suffrage league of Wells college.

Because he thinks the name Smith is symbolic of citizenship in the United States, Nathan Sinauck, a Russian mechanic, applied to the District of Columbia supreme court for permission to change his name to Nathan Smith

Spain claims the honor of having the youngest regularly enlisted soldier in the world. He is Prince Jaime second son of King Alfonso, and when he celebrated his second birthday anniversary a few days ago he was entered on the books of the Fourth Regiment of Field Artillery as a private. The commandder of the regiment, Colonel La Sota, was received in solemn audience by the King for the purpose of presenting the correct uniform to the little prince.

SOME GOOD TIPS FOR THE HOME MILLINERS

Hat Ornaments To Be Made from Odds and Ends.

CHANTECLER QUILLS LATEST OCCUPATION

Fancy Plaques and Cabochons for Aigrettes—Imported Ideas a Girl Clever with Her Fingers Can Duplicate—Some Novel Military Devices Can Be Made.

Making fancy plaques or cabochons, from under which spring surprising aigrettes and Chantecler quills is the latest occupation of the girl clever with her fingers and resourceful in making the most of odds and ends. It needs but a trip through the smart millinery establishments to send such a girl home with ideas for duplicating novelties for which high prices are asked. The foundation for one of these ornamental discs may be almost anything of the proper size and lightness.

"I made this over a wire tea strainer," said one girl proudly the other day as she exhibited a cabochon. "I bought a five-cent tea strainer, bent off the handle and jammed the center in a bit and it was just the thing, so easy to sew into and so light to wear.

"I covered it first with a layer of straw colored satin and then sewed natural straw braid around and around until the whole was covered. Then I studded the whole thing at regular intervals with jet beads and put a quilling of black satin ribbon around the outside.

"A big black aigrette tipped with jet will start from under this cabochon, which will look every bit as expensive as the aigrette, though it cost only the five cents I paid for my tea strainer. Everything else I found in the old scraps of millinery we always keep on hand.

"Another cabochon I made over a large flat cork from a jam bottle. This is also a great idea and has the same advantage as the strainer, for it is light and easy to sew through. This plaque of the cork foundation is made up of detached flowers I found in the millinery scrap box, the center a pink rose, surrounded by a little circle of forget-me-nots and then an outer circle of flatly placed lillies of the valley."

Another girl with good taste and ingenuity made a floral cabochon with a single rose as a center, around which were double plaitings of fine black lace. Two long, tapering lace quills started from under this pink and black cabochon.

For a more conservative person who objects to tea strainers and corks as foundations, large button moulds are an excellent choice and may be padded to any proportions desired before the work of decorations is begun A circle of pasteboard may also be utilized, the proper shape being attained by cutting four slits in the circumference and lapping the pasteboard until the center of the circle curves out sufficiently. This is easily done with crinoline or milliner's net, if pasteboard is too heavy.

The shape once arrived at there is no end to the decoration possible. Outturning plaitings of Persian silk make a good plaque for a black straw hat, and plaitings of alternate rows of black and white lace are effective. Odd pieces of lace may be utilized for this purpose, and two entirely different varieties of lace may be used in the same cabochon if the supply of one kind runs short.

Another simple trick of this kind is to fashion out of a triangular bit of passementerie or embroidery a sort of torch holder, the torch being the aigrette which waves out of this decorative holder. This is a novelty seen on many of the costly hats and is easily within the scope of the home milliner.

A four-inch square of some handsome trimming or spangled fabric will make two of these torch holder affairs, as a piece of this size can be folded diagonally. Each triangle should be padded slightly and mounted on a piece of milliner's net. Metal cord is often couched along the entire edge, ending in an ornamental knot at the base. Braided and embroidered linen ornaments of this kind are likely to be seen on tailored hats of the lingerie type, as they took well for the southern trade a couple of months ago.

Quills of straw braid, lace or plaited ribbon open another field for the ingenious girl. The shape of the quill is easily drawn on stiff paper and the quill made on these lines as a guide. It must be remembered that the side next the paper will be the right side when finished, so that all the last touches which belong on the right side of the quill must be made after the handmade quill is unbasted from its paper foundation. When carefully made a lace or straw quill should be almost as perfect on the wrong side as on the right.

Two stunning quills made by one girl for a big black straw hat were of plaitings of inch wide white lace, two plaitings being used for each quill, the stem being simulated by a black silk covered wire which extended the entire length of the quill, separating the two outturning plaitings of lace. This idea is capable of any number of variations, plaited quills of black lace on a white hat being one of the novelties recently seen on an imported model.

This work may be done entirely on a paper foundation, care being taken that the edge of the lace plaiting exactly touched the line marked for the outline of the quill, for much depends on the right tapering effect. Press the plaitings thoroughly before sewing on the center wire and be sure to have the wire heavy enough to cover the joining of the two plaitings.

If a very long, slender quill is desired the lace will have to be lapped at the center and cut carefully away in order to preserve the proper taper. Plaitings of ribbon and silk may be utilized in the same way. Quills of straw braid on a foundation of wired net are easy possibilities for the home milliner and quill shaped pieces of embroidered linen make convenient fancy work for the girl who wears lingerie hats.

For the girl who works with raffia all sorts of millinery capers are easy this season and she can knot, crochet or embroider any manner of hat decorations out of raffia to match her gowns. Beautiful bands embroidered in raffia on satin or silk are pleasant fancy work and make stunning bows on straw hats of the tailored type.

Huge buckles cut from black satin may be worked with a raffia edge and each corner show a more or less elaborate design in raffia embroidery. Natural straw color on black is the preferred combination and is especially fashionable this season, but the many shades in which raffia comes makes possible all manner of combinations of color.—New York Sun.

The Shrine of the SOUTHLAND

Virginia Mourning Her Dead

Gen R E Lees Home at Lexington Va

WHAT Arlington and Gettysburg are to the North and even more to the little town of Lexington Virginia in the South. Nestling tranquilly in the hills of Rockbridge county and not many miles from Natural Bridge, Lexington is the shrine of the Southern patriot the mecca of those who followed Jackson in his forced marches and who fought under Lee until that general laid down his sword for the quiet career of college president. Here as at no other place in the Southland the fires are kept burning on the altars of memory for here the two great chieftains of the Confederacy lie at rest. Every year many Northerners visiting in the South come to Lexington and stand with heads uncovered at the tombs of Lee and Jackson.

The building that holds all that is mortal of Robert E. Lee is Lee Memorial Chapel which stands in the shaded campus of Washington and Lee University. A beautifully proportioned structure of stone it was modeled by the Confederate commander and built under his supervision. The ivy has long since climbed to the top of its walls making for it a perpetual hood of green. The body of the general is in a vault in the rear of the chapel and is visible through a large draped arch from any part of the interior. Over the tomb is one of the loveliest and most impressive masterpieces that has come from the hand of any American sculptor the recumbent statue of Lee by Edward Virginius Valentine. Flawless in its whiteness and of remarkable purity and softness this statue leaves an indelible impression on any mind susceptible to deftly executed conceptions expressed in marble.

The figure of Lee lies on a couch from which the marble draperies hang in soft set folds. It is partly covered with a counterpane and so remarkably well executed are the details that several persons have actually mistaken it for a real bed coverlet. The hands of the figure are folded peacefully across the chest. In the noble face one can read quiet courage resignation and great strength of character. The contour of the features is exquisite and the white locks brushed back from the high forehead add the final touch of serenity and dignity.

On the campus higher up stands the home of Lee a simple two story structure surrounded by trees. Here the great Lee lived while president of Washington College now Washington and Lee University. Prof. Alexander J. Nelson who was one of the professors of Lees faculty tells several interesting incidents in connection with the closing of Lee as president of Washington College.

This institution was of course in a wretched condition after the close of the Civil War but its trustees determined to put it on its feet again. In August 1865 they met to select a president. According to Professor Nelson several names were presented and a vote was about to be taken when a man arose to make a statement. Word had come to him in a roundabout way he said that while the Southern people were ready to grant every wish of General Lee no offer had been made to him that would enable him to earn a comfortable living for his family. The trustees were for the moment stunned by this revelation then acting gallantly all the others were withdrawn and Lee was unanimously elected president of the college.

After this action had been taken the gravity of the situation dawned on all present and they hardly knew what move to make next. Put on a little reflection they chose Judge Brockenbrough the rector of the college to visit Lee at Cumberland county Virginia where he was living and notify him of his election and ask him to accept the office. The rector hesitated to undertake the mission. He called attention to the fact that Lee was not said that the salary he had in view was the only one he possessed. He felt unwilling to present himself to General Lee on such a mission in such shabby garments. This objection was overcome by another trustee offering to give the rector a suit. He said that he had a son in the North who had just sent him a new broadcloth suit for his own use. As the two trustees were about the same size he offered his clothes for the journey was thus gallantly attended by the rector.

But there was still another obstacle—the expense of the trip. Nobody present seemed to have money except Cincinnati Gibbons who was with no more than enough for his own expenses. Gibbons said that he knew of a lady in Lexington who had just secured some money for a portrait of Judge Buckingham county Va. That it thought might be borrowed by the college.

As it turned the lady was willing to lend the money and Judge Brockenbrough set out to the Confederate commander on his mission to the joy of all connected. The college Lee accepted the position on September 18 1865 to conduct Lexington on his famous war horse Traveller. Until his death Lee was President. His energy in building up the institution which now is a university bears its name in connection with that of George Washington, who endowed it.

When Lee was buried one of the mourners behind the coffin was Traveler the horse that had been to the Confederate leader all through the war. Baucphadus was to Alexander the Great. He had carried his master through storms of one of the most sanguinary civil wars in history. He had endured cold hunger and fatigue subjected to hardships that few horses know. His intelligence was of a high order and Lees affection for him was almost like that of human for human. It is said that as the funeral walked behind the hearse the sad horse hung his head with bowed ears and seemed to realize that he was following his master to his last resting place.

Recently the skeleton of Traveler was mounted by a taxidermist and is now in the museum at Lexington.

Beneath the auditorium of Lee Chapel is a room that is today left just as it was when Lee died. It was in Cincinnati office in which he served for five years after the war. If the Confederate commander ever returned to it in spirit he finds every bit of furniture and all his books and papers exactly where he left them. Everything is occasionally dusted but further than this nothing is touched.

In recent years there has been much talk of erecting a memorial just memorial to Lee at Lexington. The first man of prominence to make the suggestion was ex President Cleveland who strongly advocated in appeal to the Southern people for funds for such a purpose. That a memorial will some time be erected seems a reasonable supposition but whether it does or not the Virginia shrine will always remain a most beautiful tribute to the South's leader.

Gen Stonewall Jackson is buried in the cemetery at the edge of the town. The remains were twice interred. When Jackson's body was brought to Lexington from the field of Chancellorsville where the general was fatally wounded by his own men it was buried near the front of the cemetery. There it remained until 9 years ago when Valentine finished his statue of Jackson. Then it was disinterred for its final resting place further back in the ground.

Over the new grave the statue stands on a graceful pedestal. It is of bronze and shows the general in an attitude of expectancy. He is standing erect bareheaded. The left hand is on the hilt of his sword while the right hand holds a pair of field glasses. Apparently he is intently watching the movements of his army on the battlefield.

Jackson like Lee lived at Lexington before the war he was a professor in the Virginia Military Institute. Those who were closest to him knew then that he was a soldier born. His knowledge of military science was broad and exact and his moral and physical courage was never questioned. He was just the kind of man many thought to lead infantry with unflinching courage and direct speed marches without doubt of failure. Jacksons home in Lexington has in the last few years been repaired and is now maintained by the Daughters of the Confederacy as a memorial hospital.

The newest monument in Lexington and one of the most impressive anywhere is that of Virginia Mourning Her Dead. It was modeled by Sir Moses Ezekiel of Rome who has just visited this country to be present at the presentation of his statue of Thomas Jefferson to the University of Virginia. The bronze figure of Virginia sits in an attitude of mourning on a broad high pedestal. Beneath are the names of the Virginia Military Institute cadets who fell in the charge at New Market Va. in the spring of 1864. The statue is a present from Sir Moses who was a V. M. I. cadet during the war and who took part in this memorable engagement.

While some historians do not give much space to this episode of the war it was really one of the most remarkable things in the history of militarism. At the time the V. M. I. cadets were mere boys for virtually all the able bodied Southern men were in the army. But when called out they marched from Lexington down to New Market where they joined the Confederate division that was facing the federal batteries. The commander in charge did not wish to put them in action but there seemed nothing else to do owing to the scarcity of troops. So these boy soldiers who had never fired bullets before were ordered to charge up a long slope against the batteries that were planted at the top and doing deadly work. As they came pell mell they rushed rapidly toward the batteries which immediately opened up on them. The shells went through the lines. But those who survived charged heroically on.

The federal gunners astonished and dismayed by such unwavering courage deserted their batteries and the cadets with a shout dashed captured the guns.

Both friend and foe were amazed at the charge. The loss of life was felt severely throughout the Confederate camp and many deplored the seeming necessity of ordering the boys to make such a charge.

Into the statue commemorating the engagement Sir Moses Ezekiel put his whole heart and he fashioned a monument that inspires deep and admiring reverence.

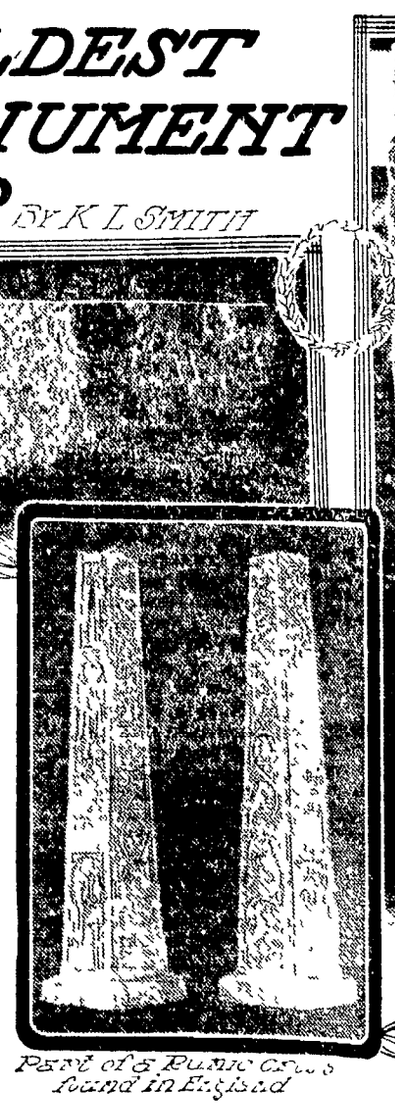
Front View of Kensington Rune Stone



Part of a Rune Cross Found in England

Indian Picture Rocks

The little trip of Columbus was not the first jaunt to these shores and that Leif Ericson had visited America long before Columbus landed our country was visited in the north by men from Northern Europe. The story of the Kensington rune stone for such this unique stone is called from the place where it was found and the inscriptions on its sides reads like romance and some day it may form the basis for a great epic American novel. Some 10 years ago a farmer near the village of Kensington in Minnesota was grubbing his land hoping to get it free from stone and ready for plowing. One day [illegible] what is now a marsh he struck something hard and investigating found this to be a stone evidently worn down by the roots of a tree that had grown around it.

Naturally Olof Ohman the farmer showed it to his neighbors and it caused much speculation. It finally fell into the hands of learned professors in Minnesota colleges and was sent to the latter place to see if someone versed in the writing of early times could read the riddle engraved on its face. Of course Ohman was accused of carving the stone himself but it was suggested that some wise light have cut the inscriptions to mystify the wiser. Cases of similar stones have been found spurious were cited and skepticism was such that after [illegible] satisfactorily translated the writing the stone was sent back to the farmer who threw it down as a stepping stone for his granary door.

Beneath this queer stone has been drawn from its obscurity Professor Hjalmar R. [illegible] a Norwegian scholar and history of the Norwegians City of Amarillo was willing to stake the belief that this stone was the diary of two Goth explorers who came to America in the fourteenth century. [illegible] Goths were sent to the [illegible] colonies of the Northmen in Greenland to [illegible] Christianity to the various tribes of the [illegible] what now Minnesota [illegible] Indians but the Indians one day when they were [illegible] hunting game and killed [illegible] ship. They hastened to [illegible] a preceding [illegible] days. Now content [illegible] has been read to [illegible] owe rice and the [illegible] of their deeds [illegible] ter lock and key among [illegible] of their adventures.

[illegible] tells its own story. On [illegible] beauty of the new land [illegible] of the new [illegible] [illegible] and still [illegible] [illegible] America they struck [illegible] their ships in search [illegible] various [illegible] what now Minnesota [illegible] Indians but the Indians one day when they were [illegible] hunting game and killed [illegible] ship. They hastened to [illegible] a preceding [illegible] days. Now content [illegible] has been read to [illegible] owe rice and the [illegible] of their deeds [illegible] ter lock and key among [illegible] of former ages.

[illegible] is the only known rune stone in [illegible] We have undertaken to [illegible] placed there by Indians but [illegible] we have had no genuine rune stone bearing messages in the letterings that such England Scotland and Greece and Italy all own [illegible]. It is possible that the Norsemade the American expedition [illegible] alone with them for the purpose of chronicling their happenings. Few rune stones are written in Swedish of the thirteenth century [illegible] proved a stumbling block in reading the Kensington stone. Those are written in many languages Norse rune alphabet is generally [illegible] to be the parent of the rest Anglo Saxon Germanic and Scandinavian runes have been [illegible].

At any rate every one admits that runes were originally the crudest form of writings and that many in England are derived from the Latin alphabet. Some investigators hold that according to the Edda the invention of runes was no less a personage than Odin the Old Nick. Probably, because his science of printing or writing was common to a few the common people at all times all sorts of mysterious powers to [illegible] inscriptions and the crude letters became a favorite Norse mythology. Ignorant people—and they were legion in the early days—thought that all kinds prophets and witches had the power to make these queer signs and that a mighty spirit lurked behind all runes. They looked on such writing much as present day savages do on our arts of civilization.

Gradually this were away and runes were more commonly used especially on markers over the dead. Fifteen hundred rune stones have been found in Sweden alone and the hieroglyphics have been found on rings arrows and even cooking utensils. A peculiarity is that the Scandinavians never used them for connected writing. They used runes for some special occasion but their stories were handed down by word of mouth. Many learned men such as Grimm Bask and Paine have studied this knowledge of ancient symbols but it remained for Worm the Danish antiquarian to drag them from obscurity. Writing in 1644 he says: Books written in Runic are very rarely to be met with the reason of which is that the first christian missionaries [illegible] both learned of our churches to [illegible] the two [illegible] of its heralds, hence did their teaching the people tried their best to do away with them promising runes to be connected with the black art and trying to make the ordinary believe it was a sin [illegible] to have taught [illegible].

Probably long before the inscription [illegible] stone [illegible] read [illegible] with [illegible] I way German [illegible] runic manuscript [illegible] have a few that are [illegible] tions. On these [illegible] splendid [illegible] manuscript [illegible] resting on [illegible] of [illegible]. It is supposed to be one of the few examples of runic [illegible] the [illegible] and stockholm [illegible] On [illegible] bearing [illegible] ing [illegible] other side [illegible] Kensington [illegible] hold [illegible] and his [illegible] man with a hawk. The runes are such an excellent state of preservation that this monument is considered one of the best ever found. In the stave rhyme of the original they read

'This nephing sign pillar
Set was by Hwaetred
Wothgar Olfwoith,
After Alefrith,
Sometime king
And son of Oswi
Pray for his souls great sin.

Sometimes the inscriptions in runes are written from left to right and others in the reverse. In [illegible] writing the lettering ran from left to right. When neither pen or pencil were available the surface stones made good repositories for the message which many of them are as [illegible] God help his soul. The writing on the Kensington stone is from left to right. One message is on its face while another on the side of the stone. Students and antiquarians are taking a keen delight in studying into the possibilities of the Minnesota stone and it is possible that it may sometime be important in the history of America. Investigators are trying to see if other similar rune stones are not in existence and if so how the writing on them compares with the inscription on the Minnesota stone. A modified form of some may be the character used in this that may alter the accepted history of our country.

JAPANESE postage stamps are considered the most artistic in the world. There is a great demand for them at present. The first stamps were issued in 1871. There are comparatively few of these ones the highest price ever being [illegible] for one of the first issue. UNIQUE METHOD TO ADVERTISE EVENT

Automobile Parade and Band Tour Country

TO EXPLOIT RICHWOOD'S HOME-COMING WEEK

And Tip the Public Off to the Fine Races Which Are on the Card for This Week—Notes and News of the Union County Town.

Richwood, O., Aug. 2.—[Special.]—An unique plan of advertising the Richwood tri-county fair and "Old Home" celebration, which is on this week, was inaugurated by its promoters, Thursday. Eleven automobiles, gaily decorated with banners and flags, left here at 2 o'clock, making a tour of the small towns, going as far west as West Mansfield, returning to Richwood via Magnetic Springs. The members of the school band rode in the autos, giving concerts in the villages along the route. Hundreds of hand bills were distributed through the country, informing the people of the greatest time ever planned for Richwood. The autos were furnished by the following citizens: J. E. Howe, F. L. Winter, Dr. I. J. Brobeck, Lewis & Sanders, Elmer Hall, O. E. Ledley, J. A. Shipley, R. W. Lenox, J. S. Kagay, Bent Cahill and G. Y. Arthur.

Rev. and Mrs. M. R. Stover were very pleasantly surprised, Thursday evening, when members of the M. P. church called at the parsonage in a body, carrying with them baskets filled with provisions of all kinds. The pastor and his wife were also presented with a sum of money. During the remodeling of the M. P. church, Rev. Mr. Stover has worked every day, being a first class carpenter, and his efforts are greatly appreciated by his congregation.

Mrs. J. L. Horn and Mrs. S. A. McNeil chaperoned a merry party of young people at a picnic at Eagle park, Magnetic Springs, Wednesday, they having planned the affair in honor of their house guests, Miss Grace Horn, Master Edgar Albright and Miss Esther McNeil, of Columbus.

Nate McGee, of Valencia, Kansas, and William McGee, of Dallas, South Dakota, are spending "Old Home" week with their brother, A. A. McGee.

Frank Welch arrived in Richwood, Saturday, from a trip abroad. During his absence, he visited South America, Spain, France and other European countries and spent some time in Egypt and on the Nile. This was Mr. Welch's tenth trip abroad.

Mr. and Mrs. B. E. Turner, superintendent and matron of the I. O. O. F. home at Springfield, visited from Wednesday until Friday with Mrs. Turner's cousin, Mrs. C. W. Sloop. All attended the picnic and home-coming celebration held by the I. O. O. F. and Rebekah lodges of Byhalia, in the Bonham grove, near that village, Thursday. Mr. and Mrs. Turner were among the prominent speakers on the program.

Mrs. Lewis Tennery returned home from a week's visit with Mr. and Mrs. Charles Smith, of Marion, Thursday, accompanied by Miss Helen Smith, who spent several days in Richwood.

Miss Mildred Horn has been the guest of her sister, Mrs. L. P. Albright, of Columbus, during the past week.

Fire Chief G. S. Collier, with his assistants, tested the fire engine and the wells of the village, Thursday, finding everything in first-class condition for the fair and "Home-Coming" celebration, this week.

Mrs. Martha Maize and granddaughter, Miss Charlotte Wolgamot, went to Marion, Wednesday, to spend a few days with Mrs. Anna Maize and family.

William Berke arrived in Richwood, Thursday, from the East, and will spend a few weeks with his father, S. Berke. Mr. Berke has been spending some time in the Adirondack mountains for the benefit of his health.

Mrs. C. W. Baker returned home, Saturday, from Mansfield, where she spent four weeks at the home of her son, Arthur S. Baker. The latter is seriously ill in Vermont, where he went a few weeks ago to visit friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Penney arrived here, Saturday night, from Chicago, to spend Old Home week with the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. O. Penney, and with Mrs. Penny's grandmother, Mrs. M. J. Mather.

Mrs. I. E. Shrader and little son, of Columbus, are guests of the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Ross.

A. E. Low, of Sandusky, and son, Lamonte Low, of Xenia, are spending the week with relatives here.

Donald McCombs, of Toledo, arrived here, Saturday, to spend the week with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward McCombs.

The Woman's Home Missionary society of the M. P. church held a regular business meeting, Friday, at the parsonage, Mrs. M. R. Stover being hostess to the society.

Miss Madeline Van Cleve, of West Mansfield, spent the past week with Miss Doris Hubbard.

Mrs. M. J. Lavton and daughter, Mrs. Letha White, of Cleveland, arrived here Saturday for a visit with M. L. Handley and family and other relatives. They were accompanied here by Miss Ruth Robinson, of Richwood, who spent two months in Cleveland.

J. E. Howe returned home Saturday from a business trip through Indiana and Illinois.

Jay Miller, of Marion, visited his mother, Mrs. M. C. Miller, Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Hoskins, of Wapakoneta, arrived here, Saturday, to spend Old Home week.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Simons, of Cincinnati, have been guests of J. M. Wilkins and family and other relatives here, since Saturday.

Mrs. Clarence Kinney returned home, Saturday, from Bellefontaine, where she spent several days with her sister.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Ackerman spent Sunday in Cleveland, having been called there by the serious illness of the former's brother.

Mr. and Mrs. S. B. Neal, of Springfield, are guest of their daughter, Mrs. Homer Kyle.

Miss Stella Fisher spent Sunday with her mother in Marion.

Mr. and Mrs. L. P. Albright and children, of Columbus, are guests of Mrs. Albright's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Horn.

Mrs. C. W. Sloop has returned home from Chicago, where she was called two weeks ago by the serious illness of her sister, Mrs. H. E. Houtz.

Alonzo Sloop, who moved here a few weeks ago from Marion, is seriously ill of inflammatory rheumatism.

F. L. Winter is remodeling the dwelling on west Bomford street, which he recently purchased of J. W. Woodruff. The house is being moved to the east side of the lot, and a new dwelling will be erected on the west side of the same.

Miss Ruby Grant, of Groveport, and Frank Grant, of Dayton, have been guests of their grandmother, Mrs. S. E. Sinkey, during the past week.

Mrs. T. W. Young, of Detroit, is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Biddle.

Mrs. Elizabeth Haines and granddaughters, Opal and Gladys Miller, visited relatives in Byhalia, Thursday, and attended the I. O. O. F. picnic.

J. M. Gunder, an aged resident of Richwood, is seriously ill at his home on north Franklin street.

Mrs. F. A. Spangler received news of the death, Thursday, of her father, Enoch Vanatta, at Montpelier, Indiana. While preparing to leave for that city, she had the misfortune to fall from the cellar steps, breaking two of the small bones in her left foot. She was unable to attend her father's funeral and suffered great pain as a result of the accident.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Hamilton and children, of Marion, visited Mr. Hamilton's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Hamilton, last week.

Mrs. Joseph Shipley and daughter, Anna, arrived home, Saturday night from a six-weeks visit with relatives in Denver, Minneapolis and other cities.

Dr. L. L. Street, who has been suffering of walking typhoid fever for several weeks, was injured, Friday evening, when he was accidentally struck and knocked down by an automobile driven by Mrs. Bert Mather. In crossing a street, the doctor and the driver of the machine failed to see each other in time to avoid a collision. Although considerably shocked by the accident, it is thought that no serious results will follow.

Miss Maude Dean, together with the other members of her Sunday-school class of the Baptist church, entertained a company of friends, Friday evening, in a delightful manner, honoring their pastor, Rev. L. S. Colborn and family, who leave here this week. After a few hours of social enjoyment, the hostesses served ice-cream and cake. The company included the following: Rev. and Mrs. L. S. Colborn, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Grover Field, Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Carr, Misses Barbara Spohn, Minnie Hayden, Minnie Smith, Maude Smith, Daisy Black, Eva Smeltzer, Edith McPherson, Jessie Jones, Irene Baker, Gertrude Colborn, Edward, Anna Mae, Charles and Stewart Jones, Ernest and Kenneth Field, Lucille Smith, Mrs. F. E. Wright and Mrs. Archie Spring.

Miss Edna Hall, of Westerville, has been a guest of Dr. and Mrs. B. P. Hall, for several days.

A large band of Gypsies arrived in Richwood, Friday, with the usual accompaniment of worthless horses and dogs, intending to remain here for "Old Home" week. Marshal B. W. Sloop promptly ordered the band to drive on.

Mr. and Mrs. Cassius E. Campbell, of South Bend, Indiana, are spending the week with the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Baker.

Frank and Elwyn Furniss went to Delaware, Saturday, to spend two weeks with their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Orville Furniss.

Morrow Embrey arrived home, Friday night, from Milwaukee, to spend "Old Home" week with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Embrey.

Miss Mary Hastings was the guest of Miss Clara Maize, of Marion, Saturday and Sunday, attending the Marion County Chautauqua.

Clean zinc with kerosene, rubbed on with a soft cloth, and follow with boiling water.

THE HEAVENS DURING THE PRESENT MONTH

Finest Part of the Heavens Undoubtedly in South.

SOME OF THE SOUTHERN CONSTELLATIONS BRIGHT

Mercury Is the Evening Star Through August—Venus Is the Morning Star—Not Half So Bright as She Was Last April, but Still Far Exceeds Any Other Planet.

The finest part of the heavens on an August evening is undoubtedly in the south, well down toward the horizon. Here we see the long curving line of Scorpio, the finest of the zodiacal constellations, and adjacent, on the left, Sagittarius. The principal configuration of the constellation—the small, inverted Milk Dipper—is very easily recognizable. The remaining stars can easily be identified, but it is impossible to see in their arrangement any suggestion of the figure of the Centaur, armed with his bow, which has from ancient times been the accepted symbol of the group.

It is equally hard to find any sense or order in the way in which the Greek letters have been assigned to the stars of this constellation. Usually they follow the order of brightness—or occasionally that of position along some well marked line, like the tail of Scorpio—but here they are sprinkled about at random, Alpha and Beta belonging to two small stars in the southernmost part of the group, while the brightest of all bears the letter Sigma—the 18th in alphabetical order.

Far more interesting than these stars are the magnificent star-clouds of the Milky way, far brighter than in any other part of the sky, which show a wealth of detail even to the naked eye, and when photographed with long exposures are found to be full of sharply defined masses, dark lanes and holes—which present one of the greatest puzzles of the skies. In some cases it seems as though we were looking through a gap between two clouds of stars to the empty space beyond; but in others the dark regions are so singular in shape, and so closely connected with visible nebulae, that it seems possible—though by no means proved—that these nebulae may be partially opaque, and nearer to us than the star clouds, portions of which they hide.

A good example of such a region on a larger scale is conspicuous to the eye in Cygnus, a few degrees north of the bright star Deneb.

Here the Milky Way is crossed by a dark streak which immediately suggests a passing cloud. But, year in and year out, on the clearest nights, the dark region is there. Its origin must be in stellar space—perhaps in an actual thinning of the galaxy, perhaps in the interposition of some cosmic cloud of overwhelmingly vast dimensions. It is reserved for the science of the future to find means to tell which is true.

This brilliant region of the Milky Way is also remarkable for many fine star-clusters and nebulae, many of which can be found by sweeping with a field-glass from Aquila down to the horizon. Perhaps the finest with a small instrument is a star-cluster between e Scorpii and d Sagittarii conspicuous to the naked eye as a nebulous spot, and resolved into the separate stars by a field-glass.

Well up in the southeast is the bright Altair, and below its constellation of the Eagle is Capricornus, notable chiefly for the pretty naked-eye double Alpha, which has a distant companion almost opposite the closer one.

This double, though not as easy as the familiar Mizar in the Great Dipper, is easily separated by an ordinarily good eye. Those who wish rather severer tests may look at an Scorpii—too low to be well seen except on a clear night—or Omicron Cygni—the southernmost of a pair of small stars half way between a and d Cygni. If they succeed with these, they may try e Lyrae, close to Vega, on a line toward a Cygni, which is too difficult for any but the sharpest eyes, but yields at once to an opera glass.

To the left of Capricornus is Aquarius, and then the great square of Pegasus. Higher up is the great cross of Cygnus, and between this and Aquila are the small groups of Sagitta, the Arrow, and Delphinus—the latter fairly conspicuous, and sometimes known as "Job's Coffin." Cassiopeia and Cepheus are in the northeast, Ursa Major and Draco above the Pole, and Lyra, with the resplendent Vega, directly overhead. In the northwest is the Great Bear, and in the west Virgo, beginning to set, Bootes, Corona and Hercules near the zenith. The small group of Libra, in the southwest, and the great one of Ophiuchus above it, complete our survey.

The Planets.

Mercury is evening star all through August, setting about an hour after the sun. He is at his greatest elongation east of the latter on the 30th at a distance of twenty-seven degrees, but being considerably south, is not very favorably placed. On the evening of the 4th he was about one degree north of the bright star Regulus. The two should be a pretty sight in the twilight about 7:30 p. m., especially as Mars is very near them.

Venus is morning star in Gemini and Cancer, rising about 2:15 a. m. on the 1st, and 3:35 on the 31st. Though less than half as bright as she was in April she still far exceeds any other planet. Mars is evening star, but is visible only at the beginning of the month. He passes even closer to Regulus on the 3rd than Mercury does the next day, and the two planets are in conjunction on the 5th with the crescent moon near by. After this he soon gets so near the sun that he is practically invisible. Jupiter is evening star in Virgo, setting at 9 p. m. in the middle of the month, and is the bright thing in the evening sky.

Saturn is in Aries, rising about 10:15 p. m. on the 15th, and observable through the morning hours. Uranus is in Sagittarius, his position on the 14th being nineteen hours, thirty-six minutes, right ascension, twenty-two degrees, eight minutes south declination, which puts him midway beween the bowl of the Milk dipper and b Capricorni. Neptune, which was in conjunction with the sun only last month, is observable before dawn. On the morning of the 11th he is about half a degree southeast of Venus, which may aid in finding him.

The moon is new at 1 a. m. on the 5th, in her first quarter at 9 p. m. on the 12th, full at 2 p. m. on the 20th, and in her last quarter at 3 a. m. on the 27th. She is nearest us on the 24th, and farthest away on the 12th—her actual distances on these two dates being 229,000 and 251,000 miles. She moves so much slower at the greater distance from the earth that it takes her more than a day and a half longer to go from new to full than back to new again.

In her circuit of the heavens she passes near Venus on the 2nd, Neptune on the 3rd, Mars and Mercury on the 6th, Jupiter on the 9th, Uranus on the 17th, Saturn on the 25th, and Neptune again on the 30th. The conjunction with Saturn is close, but occurs while the planet is below our horizon.—By Henry Norris Russell, Ph. D., in Scientific American.

A CONTRAST IN RICHES.

By William T. Ellis.

The International Sunday-School Lesson for August 7 Is "Jesus on the Way to Jerusalem." Matthew 19:1, 2, 13-26.

Highland ministers and elders used to examine church-members for "marks" to test their worthiness; the present week's study for the Sunday-schools is a passage wherein Jesus examines for two "marks"—the childlike heart, and spirit of sacrifice. In connection with the first incident, He utteredc the familiar and beautiful words, "Suffer the little children to come unto Me," and the second incident is known to scholars as "The Great Refusal"—the case of the young man who refused to surrender his wealth to the poor at the behest of Jesus. The two stories constitute a contrast in riches: the way the world looks at life and the way Christ looks at it.

The experiences of Jesus at the moment illustrated His teaching. His life spoke before His lips. He was enroute from Galilee to Jerusalem, and He might have claimed what travelers seem to regard as their right—the privilege of being self-engrossed. What shocking stories of selfishness are told by those who have had an opportunity to observe travellers! Rightly or wrongly, the impression is abroad in Europe that Americans are the most assertive selfseeking and inconsiderate of all tourists. Note well the Jesus way. He travelled to give, and not to get; to serve and not be served. So we read that on His journey He lavished His life upon all who had need, meeting the multitude in patient sincerity and healing the suffering that were brought to Him. Childlike in His ingenuous giving forth of Himself, Jesus the best of all rebukes to our calculating spohistication.

The Test of Children.

"That judgment which children have of you," once said Rev. Dr. James A. Worden, "you may take as a slice of the great judgment day." It is proverbial that dogs and children make few mistakes in their estimate of character. The confidences of childhood are more to be coveted than the congratulations of the great. Posterity has preferred to take Jesus at the estimate of the children rather than at that of the wise and eminent of His time. Mankind would not willingly lose the picture of gentle Nazarene surrounded by olive-skinned, dark-eyed boys and girls.

There is profound meaning in the familiar fact that Jesus was the friend of children. They draw near to Him, sure of sympathy, for He had that deep characteristic of the truly great, the child-like heart. And He imparts the same characteristic. His friends all show a like token. Whoever companies with Him grows like a child in this respect. Men value the arts and ways of worldly wisdom intense sophistication is a prominent trait of modern society, but Jesus puts His approval upon simple sincerity. It is hard even for a world which has sat for nineteen centuries at the feet of Jesus to realize this, even as it was for His disciples, who rebuked those bringing children to Him. "Yet of such is the kingdom."

Stream and Its Source.

Yonder flows the river Forth, in Scotland. It is a stream to be forded or dammed or diverted; anybody may seriously affect it at this point. Travel for two hours and you come to the mighty Forth bridge, where the stream flows more than a mile wide. Who now can dam it or turn it or purify it? No truth can be more commonplace than the one which this illustrates. If we mean to do aught with the streams of human life, we must begin near the source.

Rather strange, is it not, that the keen interest of the wise and altruistic is enlisted by the Young Men's Christian associations, the college guild houses, the brotherhoods and the other men's movements, while the organized Sunday-school work is wonderfully neglected by them?

Few comparatively, of the strongest men of the Christian church are identified with the Sunday-school. All honor to those who have poured out unstintedly of themselves in this service; and double honor to the legion of everyday men and women who make up the rank and file of Sunday-school workers. But is it not an indictment of the sound judgment and clear perception of the religious leaders of the day that so small a number of them really know or care anything about the one organization which holds more of hope for the future than any other?

Social problems are perplexing the church. Let us have common-sense enough to begin at the beginning—which is with the children—for their solution. There are signs that at length the Sunday-school is coming to its own. Strong and valiant men, like H. Clay Trumbull and B. F. Jacobs, now gone to their reward, have not labored in vain. The child is understood and appreciated and cultivated as never before. It is service to the church, state, the world, when a worthy man or woman undertakes the teaching and shepherding of a Sunday school class. We know, by irrefutable statistics, that most Christians have become such in childhood. If we fix the little ones in loyalty to the ideals of Jesus, society is safe.

An Angel paused in his onward flight
With a seed of love and truth and right,
And said, "Oh, where can this seed be sown
Where 'twill yield most fruit when fully grown?
To whom can this precious seed be given
That it will bear most fruit for earth and heaven?"
The Savior heard and said, as He smiled,
Place it at once in the heart of a child."
The angel whispered the blessed truth.
To a weary teacher of precious youth.
Her face grew bright with heavenly light
As she led their thoughts in the way of right.

"What Shall I Do?"

If the rich young man had been drilled in a modern Sunday-school—pardon anachronism—he would not have entered the gallery of immortals in the unenviable guise which he now wears. He would have understood that the essence of religion, as taught by all the great religions, is self-denial for the sake of spiritual progress. The young man wanted to do something to gain eternal life. He could not grasp the conception of life as a free gift. He wanted to pull himself up to heaven by his own arms. But no man can "do" enough to win all that paradise holds. His motive exalted himself overmuch and undervalued God.

Withal, he was a winsome figure. With the deep spiritual restlessness of youth eager to make the most of himself and to solve the riddle of two worlds, hungry for better soulfood than he had yet tasted, nobly moral—is it any wonder that the heart of Jesus warmed to him? He had lived an exemplary life, conforming to the best standards he knew, and there was surely no boastfulness in his frank confession of this.

What he needed, like myriads of conventional, correct-living young men and women of our day, was some grand, transforming passion, born of the spirit of self-sacrifice. It was for him, as the instant diagnosis of Jesus pointed out, to do the high, hard thing; to break the fetters that bound him to his spirit-starving conventionality; to sell his all, for instance, to give the money to the poor. This suggestion of Jesus was not primarily for the sake of the poor, or of the money, but for the sake of the young man. The world needs lives touched with the fires of vicariousness more than it needs doles of gold.

"Preposterous!" instantly cried out all the inbred sentiments of the young man, in response to the counsel of Jesus. Such a stripping of himself of his wealth would mean a descent from his accustomed station in life, it would make him just like the common ruck of people, and all his hereditary aristocracy revolted from such an idea. He would no longer be the model young man, praised and honored, but merely one of the mass of the poor. Of course, he had not peered into the profoundities of life which were in the mind of the Lord; nor had he soared to the heights of the ideals of Jesus. He did not even realize that.

Honor and Shame.

Remember, he was still young, and in the neophyte stage treasure in heaven seemed very vague and intangible as compared with the power and liberty which money brings here and now.

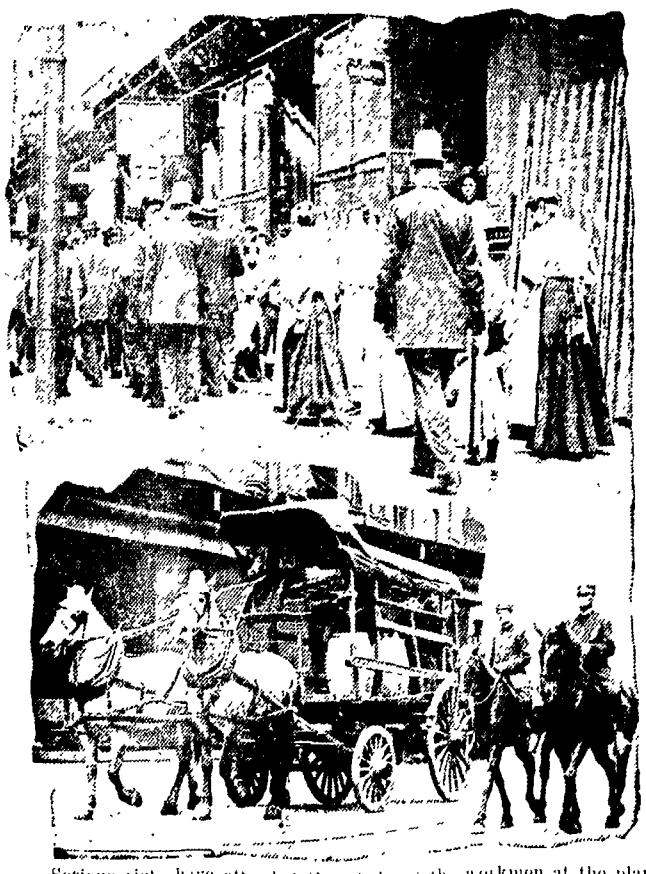
A Missed Opportunity.

So great was the consternation of the young man at the radical proposition of Jesus that he failed to catch its real point and climax. "And come, follow Me." He was so engrossed like many other honest seeker since, with the things he would have to give up that he utterly lost sight of what he would get. Dante pictures this young man as wandering through the inferno, searching for his lost opportunity. To him had come the supreme occasion: his miserable store of gold so held his eyes that he missed it.

For was not this an invitation to join the apostles? Had not Jesus offered to the young ruler, to whom His affection had gone out, a place among the twelve? That day he had the chance to become one of the most distinguished group of mortals ever written in fadeless letters on history's pages. Perhaps, as Dr. Peloubet suggests, he might have become the business man of the college, instead of Judas. To think that he might have eternally served and influenced the world as one of the intimates of Jesus, even as John and James and Peter have done; whereas he lives only as a bad example!

We never know what we miss when we turn a deaf ear to the intimations of a higher, diviner life and calling. There are multiplied agencies of Christianity going up and down America calling the choice youth of the colleges to dedicate their lives to the service of Christ. The machinery for securing recruits for the ministry and mission fields was never before so elaborate; yet recruits seem harder to get than ever. The great Edinburg conference made it plain that the call of the hour is not for money, but for life. The story of the rich young ruler is being repeated today; still as of old, to the missing of true riches.

STRIKERS BLAME TROUBLE ON SUGAR COMPANY AFTER FRAUD CONVICTIONS



Serious riots have attended the strike of the workmen at the plant of the American Sugar Refining company in Brooklyn. One man has been killed and a score or more seriously wounded. It is asserted by the strikers that the cause of the trouble is the indirect result of the government's prosecution and conviction of officials and weighers of the company in the federal courts. They declare that the company seeks to retrieve the great sums of money paid in fines by reducing the amount paid its workmen.

MERCHANTS' EXCURSION TO CEDAR POINT TUESDAY

Two Specials Carry Excursionists to the Lake.

ABOUT A THOUSAND MAKE UP THE PARTY

First Section Leaving at 6:45 O'Clock Is Made Up of Eleven Cars, and the Second, Leaving Fifteen Minutes Later, Has Six—Rain, No Doubt, Keeps Many Away.

One thousand people left this city on the annual excursion of the Marion Merchants' association to Cedar Point, Tuesday, according to the figures in the local ticket offices of the Pennsylvania railroad. Of this number there were many children.

Two special trains were run, the first leaving at 6:45 o'clock. This train carried eleven coaches, all of which were well filled. The second section with six coaches left at 7 o'clock.

The Marion excursionists arrived at Sandusky shortly after 10 o'clock, and from that point boats were taken to Cedar Point where the day was spent in an ideal outing.

The rain Tuesday morning did not materially affect the enthusiasm of the merchants and their friends who gathered at the local station early despite the unfavorable weather conditions, but it may have affected the attendance. The weather Tuesday proved favorable, and the fears of some of the excursionists were unfounded.

All of the local stores were closed for the day. Monday evening, however, the stores were open for the special benefit of the local people, and during the evening Baker's band gave a concert on the square.

In the number of people taking advantage of the excursion and in every other way, the outing proved in every way to be fully as successful, if not more so, than those conducted by the merchants in other years.

MR. JOHN LIND'S REFUSAL DOES NOT DETER DEMOCRATS

Despite repeated refusals by John Lind the Democrats of Minnesota have again nominated him for the governorship. During the hours preceding the convention, which was held in Minneapolis, there was great disorder over the platform and county option, but as soon as Lind's name was mentioned the delegates forgot their differences and agreed on the former governor as their leader this fall. And again he refused to run.

VIRGINIANS WIN OUT IN FIGHT

Wickersham Decides Lee's Statue Has Place in Hall of Fame.

Beverly, Mass., Aug. 1.—The statue of General Robert E. Lee will be allowed a position in Statuary hall in the capitol if this administration has anything to do with it. President Taft made public an opinion from Attorney General Wickersham in which the latter declares there is nothing in the act of congress under which the states of the Union place statues of their famous men in that hall to prevent Virginia from placing there a statue of General Lee.

Returning officers and enlisted men of the Second battalion of the Fourth regiment who were on the wrecked train completed the story told Sunday morning. The whole battalion had a marvelous escape from death the two horse cars probably saving them Nearly a score were hurt and all received severe jolts Two horses killed comprised the fatalities

Tangible evidence of malice in wrecking the train was brought home by officers but though several people in the little hamlet were arrested and cross questioned by officers no one was held The state may investigate Officers scout the work of an insane man rather than that of strike sympathizers of the district Bell Valley is a little mining town, three miles from Caldwell Noble county

Switch Broken Open

Investigation disclosed that the switch had been broken open by blows with a stone This was found along the right of way with a switch lamp torn from its place and thrown across a fence. The men also brought with them a derailer taken from the switch The place was ideal for a disastrous wreck a cut of cars containing only stood only twenty feet from the open switch and in that space the train sped was impossible

After a nights work in breaking camp the men were tired and all save a few were dozing when at 12 24 the crash came All were hurled from and bump and and falling baggage shattered the impact caused a fury, putting the injuries

No Sign of Panic

Heads were cut soldiers received body bruises black eyes wrenched twists and bumps in falling. Confusion reigned for only a minute for like trained soldiers that they were they had no thought of panic Lieutenant Thomas R Dale of Third avenue Columbus attached brigade headquarters and Lieutenant John S Bailey of company of Circleville were first on the scene They hastened forward and helped off the escaping steam and first investigated the extent of the damage

Freaks and features were not lacking By providential intervention the fireman and engineer escaped In the smashup the engine was partially derailed on the main but space was left for both to crawl out They were from one second

Engine Demolished

Both were able to walk about and helped direct the work about the engine which was demolished

Strange things happened to the different cars The whole front was torn off and pitched to the side of the right of way The engine itself was partially turned and pushed up on the tender In this precarious condition the cars were left The second car was badly damaged and partly turned up

The two horses killed were in the first car The were horses of Captain Mills Other troops and equipment of Columbus and Mount Vernon Co A and Washington C H

ANDREW LINDEMAN DIES IN HOSPITAL

Succumbs, Thursday Afternoon, From Injuries Sustained,

IN RUNAWAY ACCIDENT THURSDAY MORNING

The Remains Are Shipped to His Home at California, Kentucky, Thursday Night, Where the Funeral Will Be Held Saturday—Was Soon To Have Married.

Andrew Lindeman who was injured by a team of horses running away in Pleasant township, Thursday morning, died at the Central Emergency hospital, Thursday afternoon at 4 30 o'clock. Dr. R. C. M. Lewis, one of the attending surgeons, signed the death certificate, which gave the cause of his death as "crushed walls of the chest."

Lindeman never regained consciousness after being taken to the hospital, where it was discovered that several ribs had been broken and the left lung perforated. The heart was also badly displaced.

The dead man was thirty-two years of age and unmarried. He is survived by his mother, Mrs. George Lindeman, of California, Kentucky, and several brothers, one of whom is Michael Lindeman, of this city. The latter, who is employed by the Huber estate, was at his brother's bedside when death came.

Lindeman was keeping company with a young Marion woman, to whom he is said to have been engaged. She called at the hospital to see him, Thursday afternoon, but the young man was still unconscious.

The walls of Lindeman's chest were crushed by one of the heavy wagon wheels passing over him.

The remains were shipped to California, Kentucky, Thursday night. The funeral services will be held there, Saturday.

The Flowers of the Forest.

The plaintive old melody, with its pathetic verses was the favorite Scottish song of King Edward, and for that reason was played by the bands on one of the ceremonial occasions connected with his funeral obsequies, the somewhat dirge-like air harmonizing with the solemn occasion. The earliest known copy of this fine old melody is preserved in Edinburgh, and appears to have been written in the earlier part of the seventeenth century. The old ballad, a lament for the disastrous field of Flodden, has been lost, with the exception of a line or two which are incorporated in the verses written by a Scotch lady to supply the place of the lost ballad. This poetess died in Edinburg in 1794. Another lyric was written a little later, these two being adapted to the ancient and modern versions of the air.

His Courtship Short.

A novel and speedy method of choosing a wife was adopted recently by a Seattle engineer named George West. With matrimony in view, he went to Paris, Ont., and applied for a job with the Penman Woolen company. West worked for half a day, devoting most of his attention to the thousand girls engaged at the factory. Along about noon he saw Miss Florence McMillan, one of the company's importation of girls from England, and decided she'd do. Having secured her address, he called upon her the next evening, and the following day Rev. Canon Brown performed the ceremony which made them man and wife. West refunded to the company the $60 advanced for his bride's passage from England. Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. West left for Seattle.

The Doctor's Dilemma.

The question which seems likely to remain a purely academic one of whether it would be justifiable for a physician to hasten the death of a person apparently doomed to perish in horrible agony without the doctor's aid, has come to the front again. The case supposed is generally that of an engineer pinned under a wrecked train with fire rapidly approaching, and it is asked: Is the physician justified in administering a lethal dose of morphine hypodermically? We see no harm in going a little further into this dilemma. Given the engineer and his parlous position, but suppose the physician to have lost his syringe in the train wreck. Our question is: Is the physician justified in banging the engineer over the head with a coupling pin?—New York Medical Journal.

Announces Water Is Boiled.

A tea kettle that whistles cheerily to let the housewife know that the water is boiling and that the gas may be turned down has been introduced in England and is meeting with favor. The kettle has no lid through which the scalding steam may issue, but is filled and emptied through the spout, which is sufficiently large. The absence of the lid not only prevents scalding but keeps any of the steam from escaping, which means that the water will reach a boiling point much more quickly than in the ordinary kettle. In the spout is a stopper which contains the whistle, and this is the safety valve of the kettle as well as the means by which announcement is made that the water is boiling.

UNCLE SAM'S OWN VOLCANO IS AGAIN ACTIVE ON THE DISTANT ISLAND OF HAWAII

Honolulu, Aug. 3.—Just what has caused the famous volcano of Kilauea to become angry is unknown, but the older natives are certain the gods have been offended in some way, for this is not the "open season" for lava displays on the island of Hawaii. The big "fire lake" is twice its natural size, and several explosions and much rumbling are heard daily. Little lava is flowing from the crater, but an overflow is expected daily.

Caught the Jury.

"Oratory is, indeed, a lost art," said a Cleveland man the other day. "I used to go down to the courts just to hear the lurid speeches. Nothing doing in that line any more. The lawyers do not talk about flowers, rainbows and sunbeams any more.

"There was a lawyer in Cleveland years ago—Bill Robinson was his name—whose addresses to a jury always attracted a crowd. I will forever remember one of his sentences. The man he was fighting in the suit had a reputation as something of a miser.

"'Who is this man, who is he?' thundered Robinson. 'You know and I know that he boils his potatoes in widows' tears.'

"This phrase caught the jury, and Robinson won his case, but one doesn't hear any such 'oratory' as that nowadays."

The Barebone Family.

The celebrated name of Praise God Barebone was borne by a member of the Cromwell parliament called together after the dissolution of the long parliament in 1653. The royalists called the assembly "Barebones parliament." At the time when General Monk was in London Barebone headed the mob that presented a petition to parliament against the recall of Charles II. Of the Barebone family there were three brothers, each of whom had a sentence for a name—Praise God Barebone. Christ came into the world to save Barebone and if Christ had not died thou hadst been damned Barebone.

Poison In Young Rattlesnakes.

Observations on live rattlesnakes show that the poison glands become functionally active as soon as the snakes begin to shift for themselves, which must be very soon after birth. Experiments on the young ones six days after birth proved the presence of venom in small quantities. Experiments made three months after birth showed that considerable venom is secreted, as a pigeon innoculated at this time died in two hours with the usual symptoms of chronic poisoning.

CARRIED TO COURT OF COMMON PLEAS

Will Be the Intoxication Case of George Rhuland,

FOUND GUILTY AT HEARING BY MAYOR

At the Hearing a Number of Witnesses Testify in Behalf of the Defense, While Police Officials Appear on the Other Side—A New Charge Against Klehm.

For the first time in the history of the mayor's court, a prisoner charged with intoxication, will carry the case to the common pleas court. Sunday evening, George Rhuland was arrested by Officer Hostetter, and an affidavit was filed against him, charging him with being intoxicated. Rhuland strenuously denied the charge, and Sunday evening was released on a writ of habeas corpus, furnishing bond for his appearance for hearing on the charge against him.

The hearing was held before the mayor, Monday evening, lasting about three hours. Ruhland was represented by Attorney L. E. Myers, and the prosecution by City Solicitor E. T. Boyd.

Noah Little, F. R. Salter, Henry Grossglaus, Frank O'Brien, Ida O'Brien and the defendant testified in behalf of Rhuland, while F. W. Wilhelm, Officers Hostetter and Powell and Captain Bond were called by the prosecution the evidence of the last named being in rebuttal.

At the conclusion of the evidence, the mayor rendered a verdict of guilty, and fined the prisoner five dollars. Execution of judgment was suspended pending the decision in the higher court.

"Honus" Klehm, who was arrested on Owen street, Monday noon pleaded guilty to the charge of intoxication and was released only to be arrested on a charge of furnishing intoxicants in dry territory. The affidavit for the warrant was sworn to by Officer Powell. Klehm entered a plea of not guilty, and his trial was set for Wednesday afternoon at 1 o'clock. He furnished a bond of $300 for his appearance at that time.

George "Honus" Kehm was given a hearing in the mayor's court, Wednesday afternoon, on a charge of furnishing intoxicating liquors in dry territory. Kehm was arrested on the affidavit of Chief Klinefelter. The defendant was represented by Attorney L. E. Myers, and the prosecution by City Solicitor E. T. Boyd and Attorney J. H. Clark.

Chief Klinefelter and Officers Powell and Cusick and Mrs. Catherine Harruff were called as witnesses for the prosecution, and John Price, his wife and W. L. Dawson for the defendant.

At the conclusion of the testimony the attorney for the defendant filed a motion for dismissal. The motion was overruled, and after the arguments, the mayor announced that he would reserve his decision until Saturday morning.

A set of harness stolen from George Sells some time ago, was located Wednesday evening by Chief Klinefelter at the McClung second-hand store on north Main street. McClung had had the harness in his store for about a week. An investigation will be made to ascertain the parties who sold him the harness.

The mayor's collections in fines and licenses during the month of July totaled $189 90. Of this amount, $25 were collected in state cases, and the balance in city cases, most of the latter being for charges of intoxication.

To Wind Up Affairs.

An echo of the panic of 1893 came in the probate court, Thursday, when Attorney Hoke W. Donithen was named trustee to administer the homestead estate of the late John B Wyatt, of Prospect, who had failed during the hard times of seventeen years ago. Mr. Wyatt was a heavy dealer in horses, many of which he shipped to the old country. November 28, 1891, he made a deed of assignment to the late John A. Wolford. After the estate was settled up, it was decreed that Mrs Wyatt should have a life estate in the homestead at Prospect. Now Mrs Wyatt is dead and Attorney Donithen is appointed trustee to wind up affairs. He furnished $2,000 bond.

HORTICULTURAL BUILDING—OHIO STATE FAIR.

THE Ohio State Fair has many attractive exhibits, but it is doubtful if any command more attention and admiration than the displays of the state's horticultural products. The view above is the handsome structure devoted to these displays. This building will be open both day and night during the continuance of the coming exposition, to be held in Columbus Sept. 5, 6, 7, 8 and 9. In addition to the exhibit of luscious fruits, located in this building will be the booth of the Nursery and Orchard Division of the Department of Agriculture, where experts will impart free knowledge as to planting, pruning and methods for combating insect pests.

HERO OF MAFEKING COMING TO AMERICA TO ENCOURAGE BOY SCOUTS' MOVEMENT.

General Baden-Powell and Boy Scout Officer.

Boy Scouts on the March. Boy Scouts on Hospital Duty. General Baden-Powell at Time of Battle of Mafeking.

Montreal, Aug. 4. The fact that General Baden-Powell, hero of Mafeking and leader of the boy scout movement in England, is coming to Canada and will also visit the United States is interesting to thousands of the younger generation in both countries. The famous British general has sailed from Liverpool, and when he arrives here the boy scouts propose to receive him most royally. According to inquiries made here as to the date of Baden-Powell's arrival from various places in the United States where the boy scouts are organized, it is thought their hero will be welcomed as sincerely across the border as on British soil.

BUSINESS RUSHING AT DUMP WAGON WORKS

Long Wagon Conceded To Be the Best on the Market.

INVENTOR H. S. LONG EXPLAINS WORKINGS

Points Out to Star Man the Many Points in Which It Excels—One of the New Wagons Shipped—Five Others About Ready—Many Orders Are Being Received.

For stability of structure and superiority of design, the Long patented dump wagon now being turned out by the Marion Dump Wagon company, in a part of the big plant of the old Marion Manufacturing company, can not be equalled by any dump wagon now on the market. At least, that is the unanimous verdict of experts who have inspected the four wagons already completed by the company, which was but recently reorganized, with a view to demonstrating the promoters' claims, that the Long dump wagon is the best wagon of this character yet manufactured.

One of the four wagons has been shipped to the Morres-Coney company, in Cincinnati, and five others will be billed to the Queen City firm as speedily as possible to fill its order.

"We already have twenty or more orders to fill, and we expect many more," said H. S. Long, the inventor, Wednesday afternoon. "We have letters of inquiry coming in from all parts of the United States. Just the other day we got a letter from a man in Portland, Oregon, who wants the agency for the states of Oregon, Washington and Utah. We have orders to fill for a number of places in Ohio and Chicago and Carey, Illinois."

Inventor Long is enthusiastic about the future prospects of the Marion Dump wagon company and the product of his own inventive genius. "Notice that tire?" he asked in pointing out some of the wagon's strong points to a Star man. "It is one inch thick and four inches wide, and the wheels are equipped with Timpkey roller bearings, the first ever used in a dump wagon. They are what is known as Saven wheels, with sixteen spokes instead of fourteen, and the boxing is incased in iron instead of wood.

"A year ago the Morres-Coney company, of Cincinnati, bought three of the wagons we formerly made and now it wants six more. The wagon will weigh 1,900 pounds and haul from two to three yards of dirt."

One of the important features of the Marion dump wagon is that it is short-coupled, with a wheel base of five feet and eleven inches. Other dump wagons are from ten to twelve feet long, and do not carry so much of a load.

Another feature, that other dump wagons are without, is the end-gate, which is so constructed as to let it down and permit the hauling of lumber or heavy iron rods. The wagon also has four leaves, or dirt pans, either one of which can be released separately, thus allowing the dumping of any part of the load at any place, or dumping all of it at once.

BUSINESS MEN TO GUARD CITY

Will Serve as Deputy Sheriffs During Columbus Strike.

GOVERNOR ON THE SITUATION

Says Peace Dove Hovers Around but Can Not Be Induced to Alight—Deplores Effect That Boycott on Care of Rail-Light Company Has or Business of City and Urges Both Sides to Make Concessions — Passenger Hit With Brick.

Columbus, O., Aug. 5.—Following the withdrawal of half the troops on strike duty, many disturbances of a minor nature broke out in all quarters of the city. Cars were stoned and one passenger was hit on the head with a brickbat and so seriously injured that medical attendance was necessary. It is not believed that the remaining three regiments will be permitted to break camp until some time next week.

In speaking of the efforts made by himself, the chamber of commerce and the state board of arbitration to throw salt on the dove of peace, Governor Harmon said: "The dove keeps fluttering around, but, somehow we can't get it to alight."

"This strike can not and must not go on indefinitely," continued the governor, with emphasis. "If nobody suffered except the stockholders of the company and the men on strike there would be some excuse for letting them fight out their differences to the end; but as it is every man, woman and child in Columbus is made to suffer. Business men are losing thousands of dollars every day; the state is spending thousands keeping the troops here, and nearly everybody is walking. If they won't take my suggestion let them take some other suggestion. But let them do something toward a settlement."

Call For Volunteers.

Sheriff Sartain and Mayor Marshall appeared before the chamber of commerce and the sheriff asked the members to assist him in getting deputies to serve during the strike. "We can control the situation if we can secure a sufficient number of good men to act as deputies."

Mayor Marshall has asked the chamber of commerce to assist him in recruiting a force of 1,500 special policemen from among the business and professional men of the city, to serve only in emergency when riots break out after the remaining troops are withdrawn from the city. A meeting of the chamber of commerce has been called for tomorrow afternoon to consider the request.

Manager Stewart of the Rail-Light company says that traffic is increasing at a remarkable rate and predicts that within the next week it will be restored to normal conditions. On the other hand, Business Agent Miller of the carmen's union says that a close tab has been kept on all cars by union pickets and that each car has averaged only four passengers a trip.

New Strikebreakers Arrive.

Forty men from Minneapolis and Chicago arrived in Columbus to take the place of the striking streetcar men, according to information which reached the union headquarters. One of the imported men, a member of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, quit his job as soon as he discovered the conditions existing, and reported at the union headquarters.

He said he was J. F. Baker of Minneapolis and that he was informed before coming here that all labor troubles were over with and most of the old men had been taken back. They paid his expenses here and guaranteed his expenses back after he had served 90 days, he said.

Soldiers Help Strikers.

Toledo, O., Aug. 5.—The Sixth regiment and Signal and Hospital corps came home from strike duty at Columbus. The soldiers were unanimous in their expressions in favor of the streetcar strikers. En route from Columbus the regiment raised a purse of $500 which was forwarded immediately to Columbus, with instructions to turn it over to the families of the strikers.

Arrested For Train Wrecking.

Marietta, O., Aug. 5.—As he stepped from a train here Charles Sugitt, coal miner from Belle Valley, O., was arrested on charge of wrecking the train carrying National Guardsmen to Columbus for riot duty Saturday night. Sugitt is an American, 26 years old. The wreck injured 17 guardsmen and killed a number of horses.

Baby Found in Well.

Lexington, Ky., Aug. 5.—The body of Frank Demma, 12, son of Joe Demma, prominent Italian resident here, was found in a disused cistern. The boy had been missing since July 15. Chief of Police Warren was asked to hold a man who threatened Demma some time ago, but refused to do so.

A HORSE ATTRACTS ATTENTION TO FIRE

Mrs. Thomas Moon Celebrates Birthday Anniversary.

Meeker, O., Aug. 5.—[Special.]—What might have resulted in a disastrous fire started, Saturday noon, in the barn at the C. H. McElvey home. A horse belonging to Mac Cookston was heard making a disturbance and on investigation it was found that the bedding under the animal was blazing almost to the loft above. Prompt work subdued the flames. It is supposed that a match dropped in the bedding caused the fire.

About thirty of the children and grandchildren of Mrs. Thomas Moon gathered at her home, Sunday afternoon, to celebrate her birthday anniversary. They presented her a large friendship ring on which was tied a bow of ribbon from each child and grandchild. Mrs. Moon is the mother of thirteen children, twelve of whom are living. MARYSVILLE WILL HAVE A FINE FAIR

Its Premium List Is Now Being Extensively Circulated.

The sixty-fourth annual fair of the Union County Agricultural society will be held at Marysville, September 13, 14, 15 and 16, and great preparation is being made for the event.

A booklet, containing the premium list and all other information about the fair, is being sent out over the country. It also contans a description of Marysville, the county-seat, which, as a city of 7,000, boasts of many things of which its citizens may well feel proud.

A splendid racing program has been arranged, and some of the best races to be witnessed in the state this year will be negotiated on the Marysville track. The various agricultural departments are well filled already, and indications point to a very successful fair.

LEARN CRIPPEN BOUGHT POISON

New Theory Advanced By London Newspaper.

CONFESSION STORY IS DENIED

Attorney For American Charged With Murder of Actress Wife In London Demands Examination of Body by Private Physician In Order to Establish Identity — Accused Physician For Several Months Practiced Profession In Ohio's Capital City.

London, Aug. 5.—This morning's Chronicle prominently displays a story suggesting that Dr. Crippen poisoned his wife. The assertion is made that the police are now investigating the purchase on Jan. 29 of five grains of pyasin from the drug firm of Lewis & Burrows, New Oxford street. A half grain of this drug would be a fatal dose.

The Telegraph prints a similar story, with the additional statement that Crippen signed the register in the drug store in his own handwriting and his full name The firm, the paper says, knew Crippen, and knew also that he had a medical certificate.

Solicitor Newton, who has been retained to defend Dr. Crippen, made his first move when he filed a formal application asking the authorities to permit an independent physician to examine the bits of human flesh found in the Crippen cellar. It is understood Newton will contend that they can not be identified as having belonged to the body of Belle Elmore.

DENY CONFESSION STORY

Authorities Say Crippen Has Told Nothing About Crime.

Quebec, Aug. 5.—The Quebec provincial authorities were insistent that Dr. Crippen had not made a confession. They maintained this attitude in the face of persistent rumors that some sort of a statement had been secured from the prisoner that throws light upon the mysterious death in London of his actress wife, Belle Elmore.

This much is known: Inspector Dew and the Canadian detectives have not visited Crippen's cell or had any direct communication with him for 24 hours. Dew has disappeared and is reported to have gone to Niagara Falls.

Once Lived In Columbus.

Columbus, O., Aug. 5.—Dr. Hawley H. Crippen, under arrest in London charged with the murder of his wife in London, Eng., was a resident of this city for several months about 20 years ago, having been employed as an examiner in the office of Dr. Lyon.

GIVES WARNING TO SPAIN

Cardinal Ferrari Says Holy See Confronted Worse Situations.

Rome, Aug. 5.—Discussing the strained relations between the Vatican and the Spanish government, Cardinal Ferrari said: "The attitude of Spanish ministry toward the holy see is due to the intrigues of the Free Masons. The latter find in Premier Canalejas a ready tool. The Vatican continues to act loyally toward Spain, keeping the nuncio at Madrid as a proof that the church is disposed to continue the negotiations. Sooner or later the defeat of Canalejas will be complete.

"The whole thing is the result of the anti-Clerical wing which swept over France, crossed the Pyrenees and is now passing through Spain. The church has won more difficult battles in the past and it must not be forgotten, that the nations which have quarreled with her have brought on their own ruin."

Arrested For Recluse's Murder.

Lafayette, Ind., Aug. 5. — William Ashby, son of a grocer, is under arrest on a charge of murdering Samuel Waddell, a trapper, whose charred body was found in the ruins of an old log cabin nine miles west here. Waddell was known to have a large sum of money on the night the fire, and $8,200 in gold was found in the ruins of the cabin.
